Man Mysteriously Burns to Death in Benning Torch Car

VICTIM IS FOUND SITTING UPRIGHT IN BLAZING AUTO

Provost Marshal Tries in Vain To Extinguish Inferno, But Terrific Heat Drives Officer Away.

IGNITION NOT ON;
AUTOPSY PLANNED

Body Tentatively Identified as That of Bill Williams, Auto Salesman.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 22.

The second torch death in less than two months confronted authorities here today with discovery of the body of a man in a blazing automobile on the reservation of Fort Benning, the nation's largest army post.

The gruesome discovery was made by Captain Thomas E. Drake, assistant provost marshal at Fort Benning, who said the vehicle was a raging inferno when he came upon it on a little-used road.

Victim Is Sitting Up.

Captain Drake said the victim was sitting up, with upraised hands, behind the steering wheel.

The body was tentatively identified as that of W. P. (Bill) Williams, salesman for a Columbus automobile firm, but officials at the military reservation declared last night the identification was not positive.

Identification was partially established by George Ryan, Columbus motor company executive, who told Fort Benning officers a wrist watch, ring and cigarette lighter, found in the automobile, were similar to articles owned by Williams. The watch had stopped at 11:20 o'clock.

Captain Drake discovered the blazing car at 11:30 a. m. while returning to the post after an inspection tour of guard posts on the reservation.

Pulls Door Open.

Captain Drake reported that as he approached the car, it still was burning. He hastily alighted from his machine, he said and managed to pull open a door, attempting to extinguish the flames with a small hand extinguisher he had brought from his own car.

Unable to check the fire, however, Captain Drake walked a mile to a telephone and called the Fort Benning fire department, which soon extinguished the blaze.

The body of the occupant was charred beyond recognition. Investigation of the automobile showed that the top had been completely destroyed. An examination showed that the ignition switch had been cut off and the motor was in low gear.

A tentative autopsy was held at the military reservation, where the body was held last night pending completion of the autopsy today, but officers were unable to discover anything that would aid them in establishing the cause of death or the reason for the fire.

It was announced at Fort Benning there was no indication of

Prettiest Girls In World From Atlanta—Flagg

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP)—James Montgomery Flagg,

But, he added, "they came there from Peachtree street in Atlanta, Ga."

"Get this straight," he said in an interview, "beauty comes from breeding. I have never seen a beautiful woman in a beauty contest."

Flagg was here to deliver a picture at a banquet of the American Forest Fire Foundation.

NEW FREIGHT RATE BILL INTRODUCED

Ramspeck Act Would Bar Preferential Tariffs to Any Territory.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,

Constitution Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—A joint resolution directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate freight rates from non-official to official territory by rail or water, today was introduced in the house by Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, leader of that body's freight rate bloc.

The resolution, drafted in collaboration with Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, seeks to amend the Interstate Commerce Act by making it unlawful for any common carrier to give any unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, company, firm, corporation, association or locality, port, port district gateway, transit point, region, district, or territory, in any respect whatsoever.

Ramspeck introduced the resolution after extensive hearings had been held by the Interstate Commerce committees of both houses on his earlier bill which sought to amend the ICC act by forcing the commission to set just rates that no greater charge for the transportation of property moving from one rate making territory to another could be levied than the charge for the transportation of the same property moving wholly

COX BILL TO PROBE WPA FACES VOTE

Approved by Rules, Measure Won't Be Opposed by 40, Author Says

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP)

The likelihood that there would be a congressional investigation of the WPA increased today when the house rules committee approved, by a vote of 7 to 4, a resolution ordering such an inquiry.

If the resolution is approved later by the house, the inquiry will be made by the house appropriations committee. That group already is wrestling with the issue of whether to give the relief agency an additional $150,000,000 for its expenses through June 30, or to pare the amount down to $100,000,000. Mr. Roosevelt has asked the larger sum.

Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, author of the resolution for the investigation, said it probably would be brought before the house next week and predicted "there won't be 40 votes against it."

He had "no objection to the investigation if a majority of the house wants it."

He added, however, that the appropriations committee already was intending to scrutinize WPA activities thoroughly before granting the agency more money for expenses in the year beginning July 1.

The Cox resolution instructs the appropriations committee to "re-

Some of Teachers Face Actual Want

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

Lawyers and economists through the centuries have agreed that there is no appeal from this most fundamental of all the laws of nature: "One gets hungry when one doesn't eat!"

In more than a hundred Georgia counties today a more or less useless amendment is being added: "even if he's a school teacher!"

Just across the line from Fulton county are several neighboring counties where the grim tragedy of Georgia's school collapse unfolded yesterday.

In those counties teachers explained the grim struggle for existence that has been forced on them by a state that can no longer pay them for the work they are doing among the children of Georgia.

Let C. E. Collins, principal of the Mableton school, in Cobb county, describe the problems of his ten teachers:

"Some of our teachers have exhausted their credit."

"They are being forced to live on relatives or ask their landlords to share their gamble not only for the future board bills, but in many instances for board bills that are long past due."

"Teachers at our school have not received one red cent for work in the last three months."

"We cannot pay our bills. We have nothing but promises that we will ever get our money or to be able to pay those mounting bills."

"The situation is serious, most serious in a profession which should not be harassed by worries over the right to existence."

In all communities certain standards of living are demanded of school teachers which they cannot afford to ignore. They must live a life without blemish; they must not chisel. Their best thoughts must be centered toward

NON-UNION MEN TAKE OVER TAXIS

Company Calls It Walkout, Cabbies a Shutout; Turn in Cars at Midnight

Differences between union taxicab drivers and officials of the Black & White Cab Company reached a climax at 12:01 o'clock this morning.

The drivers said they were shut out; the company insisted it was a walkout.

Taxicabs which moved after midnight were driven by non-union drivers, who declared themselves satisfied with the company's wage scale, which had been rejected by Local Union No. 450, Chauffeurs, Teamsters and Helpers of Atlanta.

Approximately 300 drivers were affected. Their stand received the endorsement of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, which last night adopted a resolution "condemning unfair tactics" on the part of the Black and White Company. The international organization of chauffeurs also endorsed the drivers' stand.

Union drivers, unwilling to accept terms of the cab company calling for 35 cents an hour instead of 40, turned in their cabs at midnight.

Efforts at a reconciliation fell through late yesterday afternoon when union representatives failed to agree to a "compromise measure" offered by A. L. Belle Isle, president of the company. Belle Isle said he offered to have a group of three businessmen investigate conditions of the company and, if it was found justifiable, to split net profits with the drivers providing they agreed to continue driving at 35 cents an hour.

Captain Luther Carroll, in charge of the morning watch, detailed patrolmen to principal taxicab stands downtown, while two officers cruised downtown in a patrol car.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS CONFER ON CRISIS AT STATE CAPITOL

Fulton Superintendent Offers To Give Job to Any Educator Fired for Filing Test Suit.

FACT-FINDING BODY NAMED FOR PROBE

Auditor Zack Arnold Says County Systems Can Borrow From Banks.

Impassioned oratory by school superintendents and board members yesterday rang through the Georgia house of representatives where legislators sat for 70 days without providing funds necessary for continued operation of the schools. The meeting brought these developments:

1. Plea by Superintendent Jere Wells, of Fulton county, that some teacher bring suit for back salary as a means of testing the validity of a teacher's contract.

2. Appeals for school trustees to make efforts to keep their institutions open "by whatever means possible."

3. Increased optimism that methods would be found to continue operation of schools until the end of the present term.

Rivers Criticized.

4. Sharp criticism of Governor Rivers and homestead exemptions by W. M. Rainey, DeKalb county school superintendent.

5. Prediction the state would not repudiate the debt it owes the school teachers.

6. Statement by Mrs. E. D. Rivers that the state's expanded education program would be resumed in the near future despite opposition from "those who put personal selfishness above the importance of their fellow men."

Appointment Fact-Finders.

7. Appointment of a fact-finding committee last night at the request of Superintendent Wells "to determine the true financial picture of the schools." This committee will work in co-operation with the senate and house investigating committees.

In urging that some teacher bring a test suit to determine the status of a contract, Superintendent Wells said, "I think we ought to know whether a teacher's contract is binding." It has been contended that if the teachers are not paid by the end of the fiscal year, the state will not owe them. "I would encourage a teacher to bring a friendly suit," Wells said. "I do not think superintendents and other school officials should

Raw Meat Eater Shoots 2 Possemen in Mountain Battle

POWELL, Wyo., March 22.—(AP)

Entrenched in a veritable fort of mountain rocks, Earl Durand, Wyoming's "Tarzan" slayer, shot down two posse men in a gun battle late today with a surrounding force of 65 Wyoming and Montana officers.

The two posse men fell on a mountain slope directly in Durand's line of fire from his citadel of rocks, 400 feet up the side of a steep ridge.

Game Warden Boyd Bennion said he believed the two men shot were Arthur Garto, of Meeteetse, Wyo., and Orville Lindbury, of Cody, Wyo. Whether they were killed or wounded was not known.

Unable to go to the aid of the two men, the posse officers aimed a heavy rifle barrage at the stronghold of the besieged raw meat-eating fugitive, sought since last Thursday for the slaying of two Wyoming peace officers.

Durand remained safely entrenched as darkness fell, commanding from his fortress a clear line of fire to his front, his right and his left.

Posse members said any attempt to attack Durand from the rear would entail a night-long hike across steep mountains.

The posse caught up with Durand's trail after he had kidnapped a ranch couple and forced them to drive him to the mouth of Clark's canyon. The rancher and his wife were released unharmed.

Carrying dynamite bombs, Bill Monday, Cody pilot, flew over the battle scene in an attempt to blast Durand from his lair. With darkness closing in fast over the steep ridge, Monday said he could not find the fugitive's refuge and had to return to Cody without dropping the bombs.

Bennion said Garto and Lindbury were advancing in the deployed posse line with him after the pursuing officers had tracked Durand to his lair with two bloodhounds.

There had been an exchange of shots, Bennion said, with the shaggy-haired Durand, believed to be carrying five rifles, a six shooter and fresh ammunition he seized at a ranch last night.

Bennion said the two men decided to make a break across an open stretch of rock toward Durand's rock-surrounded refuge.

"I pleaded with them not to," Bennion said.

"But they wouldn't listen. They broke out of the trees, running."

"First one of them, I think it was Garto, threw up his arms and fell backwards."

"An instant later, the other one,

Lindbury, fell forward on his face," Bennion recounted.

"It sounded to me like Durand was shooting with a six-gun, then. They're right out there in the open straight in his line of fire. It would be suicide to try to get to them."

Bennion said Durand fired several shots at the game warden's place of hiding behind a shelter of rocks and trees.

The game warden retreated safely to the posse base at the foot of the Bear Tooth mountain range about 40 miles north of Cody, Wyoming.

With short-wave radio equipment of the Federal Forest Service, Bennion summoned an ambulance, reinforcing posse men and reported the wounding of the two officers to County Attorney Oliver Steadman.

First Land Is Bought for Howell Homes

Mrs. Mamie Forsyth Gets $2,100 for Residence Built in 1896 and for 50 by 80 Foot Lot.

The Atlanta Housing Authority yesterday bought the first of more than 200 parcels of land, preparatory to the erection of the $3,453,000 Clark Howell Homes, the first unit in a $14,000,000 rehousing program.

Options have been taken on 97 per cent of the remaining parcels, and condemnation proceedings brought against the rest.

The seller was Mrs. Mamie Forsyth, of 253 Merritts avenue. She was paid $2,100 for her six-room residence and 50 by 80 lot.

Mrs. Forsyth's house was built in 1896, and has been occupied by her and her husband since. Unlike most of the homes in the area to be cleared and rebuilt, the Forsyth home has plumbing, and was classified in "good" condition.

The check was drawn on the development fund of the Housing Authority of the City of Atlanta, and was signed by A. R. Dorsen, treasurer. The Authority has recently requisitioned more than a million dollars to start work on the Clark Howell project.

Mrs. Forsyth said that she was delighted to sell her home to the Authority. First of all, she said, it would relieve the financial situation of the Forsyth family, and secondly, the rehousing development will be a great help to the section.

The Forsyth home is of frame construction, has six rooms, a bath, but no cellar and furnace. It was given to Mrs. Forsyth by her husband, J. J. Forsyth, a merchant, when it was built 43 years ago, when the section was entirely undeveloped.

"It wasn't even on a street then," she said, "and I told Mr. Forsyth that I wouldn't live way out there unless he gave me the house."

The section today is one of the most thickly populated in the city. The new development will cover 30 acres, adjacent to Techwood homes. Residences there have been classified for the most part as "sub-standard," and lack most modern conveniences.

The Forsyth house and its neighbors will be replaced by fire-resistant, entirely modern, semi-detached homes, to rent for $3 a month per room to low-income families. The rent to be charged by the Housing Authority is slightly less per room than the rent obtained by the Forsyth's for three of the rooms in their frame, grate-heated house.

Authority officials said yesterday that they expect to advertise for construction bids on the project around the middle of May.

LABOR PEACE HOPE SLUMPS SHARPLY

Lewis' Defiant Speech Held Rejection in Full of AFL Proposals.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(UP)—Prospects for peace in the ranks of organized labor, never bright despite President Roosevelt's personal intervention, slumped sharply tonight.

The new drive to unify the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations appeared to have reached a crisis and developments in the next 72 hours may reveal whether the rival factions will reunite, or continue their struggle for supremacy.

CIO President John L. Lewis struck a note of pessimism with a defiant speech in New York in which he served notice on the AFL that "the great organizations comprising the CIO do not propose to dissolve themselves and chop themselves into a multitude of pieces as the price of unity."

He spoke as the AFL executive council met in extraordinary session here to decide whether to make new concessions in the interests of peace.

In New York, Lewis told a United Mine Workers' Union Tri-District Anthracite Workers' Convention that the CIO "will strike back" if unity negotiations fail.

"The CIO is able to defend itself," he declared. "The day will come when patience ceases to be a virtue."

It matters not whether the opponents of the CIO were the Bethlehem Steel Company and the Douglas Aircraft Corporation, or whether it is the hidebound aristocrats who control the destiny of the AFL. The CIO will go on.

No AFL council member would comment for quotation on Lewis' speech. Some of them said privately, however, that they believed it amounted to a rejection in full of AFL peace proposals and that it would make unity impossible.

PLEDGE TO ASSIST AUDITORIUM PARK

White Wants One-Project Status for Work

Councilman John A. White, chairman of the municipal buildings committee, and Councilman Cecil W. Hester, chairman of the parks committee, yesterday pledged co-operation in developing the newly acquired auditorium park and the remodeling of the front section of the auditorium. Councilman White insisted the two improvements should be treated as one project.

White pointed out that Hester is a member of the municipal buildings committee and also of the finance committee, which must approve financial arrangements for the project. He wrote Mayor Hartsfield a letter denying his committee wishes to assume all the jurisdiction over the projects but asserted the WPA had already promised to give aid to the park construction and the building remodeling as one project.

Hartsfield declared again that the park committee will supervised the park development when the old city hall site-park property swap has been finally completed.

Georgian Cancels $65,000 in Mortgages

Henry H. Nelms, 86-year-old Dougherty county bachelor-farmer, probably never experienced the burden of a mortgage. He worked hard, accumulated moderate fortune, and until last week held mortgages on many properties in and around Albany. The week he cancelled approximately $50,000 in mortgages on homes, and another for $15,965 on Albany's First Baptist church. He is shown here holding the church mortgage, just before destroying it.

Dougherty Farmer Who Cancelled Mortgages Is Hailed as 'Greatest'

Entire County Praises Henry H. Nelms, Who Wiped Out $65,000 Worth of Debts Within Two Days; Example Heeded in Church.

By LEE FUHRMAN, Staff Correspondent.

ALBANY, Ga., March 22.—"He's the greatest man in the state." That's the unanimous, whole-hearted and enthusiastic opinion of this community about its "uncrowned king"—Henry H. Nelms, 86-year-old bachelor-farmer, who won the heart of every Dougherty county citizen this week by sharing his worldly goods with others.

Everywhere, the folks were still talking today about Nelms' generosity in wiping out more than $65,000 worth of mortgages within two days, an action that stirred this community as it has never been stirred before.

Explains Action. While the whole town talked, praising the robust, kindly farmer to whom the soil has been good, Nelms himself said little. But that little was plenty as far as his benefactors were concerned. For, explaining his deeds, Nelms said simply:

"I planned to help those folks after I died, and so I thought I'd just give it now, and let them enjoy it while I'm living."

Always popular in the town, Nelms, a big man, weighing more than 200 pounds, and with penetrating eyes, gray hair and a gray mustache, stood today as the county's "No. 1 Citizen."

Typical of the way the community feels about Nelms was the enthusiasm of one of the many persons whom he benefited—Patrolman J. H. Coffey, 72, a member of the police department for 27 years.

"He's the greatest man in the state," said Patrolman Coffey, for whom Nelms cancelled $3,000 worth of mortgages on two properties. "I feel so grateful I just don't know how to express myself. It's God's blessing that such a man lives."

"It was certainly wonderful of him to help me and the others. I'd do anything in the world for him. Not only did he cancel the mortgages pull me out of a hole, but it also enabled me to pay up some old debts."

Patrolman Coffey, who has three daughters and 14 grandchildren, explained that a note in-heredent caused him to mortgage the properties several years ago.

"I made a few bad investments, too, and the depression came along," he said, "and, well, sir, I don't mind telling—I was in bad shape until Mr. Nelms pulled me out. He'll never know just how much I appreciate it, because I haven't got the words to tell him."

Equally enthusiastic was Dr. Raleigh White, now in his tenth year as pastor of the First Baptist church, where Nelms holds membership and where he cancelled the church's mortgage of $15,000. "We had a glorious time here Sunday when the mortgage was cancelled," said Dr. White. "There was a great crowd at the church, and everybody was elated beyond words. Mr. Nelms is one of the finest men that ever lived and his generosity has stirred our town in a great way."

Nelms' action in wiping out the church mortgage led an action of generosity on the part of the congregation, as a mark of appreciation of Nelms' deed, Dr. White said.

The congregation felt it wanted to do something to show how gratified everyone was," he continued, "and so that night there was subscribed $3,500 to clear the debt on the pasturing. Now we are completely out of debt. One fine act led to another."

The example Mr. Nelms has set in living Christian principles is one of the finest things that ever happened in our community."

S. B. Lippitt, county attorney and counsel for Nelms, who handled details of the transactions, said, as Nelms' attorney, he was not authorized to disclose the exact number and persons who had been aided, but commented:

"What he did was received with a great deal of appreciation of gratification that such a man lives."

SCHOOL BOARD ORGANIZED. ELBERTON, Ga., March 22.—The newly elected city board of education has been sworn in with Carter A. Arnold as president, John A. Logan, vice chairman, and H. H. Wilcox, secretary. The other members of the board are F. S. Fortson and F. W. Auld.

ROSSIGNOL, CROCY CASE POSTPONED

Trial Taken From Calendar After Illness of Two Balks Court

Illness of an attorney and a witness and the shortness of time remaining to the March session of the United States district court, yesterday caused Judge E. Marvin Underwood to take the government's case against Joseph R. Rossignol and A. J. Crocy from the calendar, and set it for trial during the October criminal term of court.

The case was originally scheduled for trial last Monday, but defense counsel obtained a postponement until tomorrow because Clint W. Hager, one of Rossignol's attorneys, was confined to his home with influenza. Yesterday, it was reported that W. A. Ray Jr., one of the government's important witnesses was also ill.

Judge Underwood explained that recent developments indicated that a minimum of two weeks would be required for the trial, and that the court was due to hold a criminal-civil session in Newnan beginning April 3.

The defendants' former partners in a bankrupt brokerage firm, are under bond awaiting trial on a grand jury indictment charging them with using the mails to defraud.

Judge Underwood yesterday adjourned the federal grand jury subject to call, after they returned nine indictments; five of them for violations of the internal revenue laws; two for conspiracy to violate the same laws, and two against four persons accused of violating the national motor vehicle theft act.

High School Students To Aid Highway Planning

Pupils To Fill in Questionnaire About Why, Where Mother and Father Drive Family Auto.

By FRANK DRAKE.
Atlanta and Fulton county mothers and fathers who drive cars are going to become the pupils of their high school age children next week—and the questions the students ask their parents are going to leave plenty of headaches for poor mother and dad.

As a part of their home work, the high schoolers are to fill in a voluminous questionnaire all about why and where pop and mom drive the family bus. Father will answer the question of how far he drove the automobile last year with confidence and perhaps he'll reply "15,000 miles." But when he starts to figure out where he drove those 15,000 miles and what routes he traveled and how many miles he went on that fishing trip last spring and how far he drove just going around the corner to the grocery store or the pool hall—that's where the trouble will begin.

He (or mother) will have to figure up how many miles it is from home to the office and how many times the round trip was made, and then he will have to recall way back yonder when that relative was ill and the family ran down to Macon by way of Forsyth and came back by Griffin and so on.

The questionnaire-home work of the high school students of the Atlanta and Fulton county high school systems is the Road Use Survey being conducted by the highway planning division of the state highway department, and it begins officially Monday.

When the parents have struggled through all the questions and derived at answers, statisticians of the highway planning service will be able to determine the amount and type of driving done by Atlanta and Fulton county residents and to determine whether those contributing funds for highways, roads and city streets are deriving benefits proportionate to their expenditures in taxes.

If Fulton parents think this is a pretty large order, then let them be put to shame—because the high school students and their parents in 130 other Georgia counties have already filled in the questionnaires and averaged better than 75 per cent usable interviews.

PERKINS CLEARED OF HOUSE CHARGES

Impeachment Resolution Is Quashed.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP) A report that Secretary Perkins should not be impeached for delaying deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, west coast CIO leader, was made by a house judiciary subcommittee today.

The five-man subcommittee, authorized to recommend final disposition of accusations made against the Labor Department chief by Representative Thomas, Republican, New Jersey, said it had found nothing to justify further inquiry.

Thomas' charges were investigated at length by the full judiciary committee, which will discuss the subcommittee's report at sessions starting tomorrow.

way planning division, is making the matter a little easier for the parents by sending each one a complete road map of the state, which will help dad remember the route he traveled when he was called to Waycross, Savannah or Augusta on business, and it will tell him how many miles between the cities.

School and state officials urged parents to co-operate as much as possible in filling out the questionnaires, since information to be gained will later result in material benefit to motorists.

High school students will be instructed in the proper manner of filling out the form and they in turn will tell dad and mother. Students in Boys' High, Girls' High, Fulton High, North Fulton High, West Fulton High, Milton High, Russell High, College Park High and the Campbell High school at Fairburn, and at the Booker T. Washington High school for negroes will take part in the new type of home work. Students whose parents do not own cars are to interview neighbors who have no children in the high schools.

Obtaining information about public wants and needs regarding roads and highways through the co-operation of high school students has been successfully accomplished in several other states, and this method has been endorsed for Georgia by Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent. He pointed out the students learn about government and the highway program through participation in such a venture.

GIANNINI CHARGES RECOVERY STIFLED

Claims Business Will 'Go Places' If Co-operation Is Given.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—(UP)—Amadeo Peter (A. P.) Giannini, the far west's most influential financial figure, said tonight that the Roosevelt administration is holding back recovery and that business is ready to "go places" once the New Deal clears the way by translating into action its promises of co-operation.

Expressing confidence in the future of this country and in the ability of its business and industrial leaders to lead it to new prosperity, the head of Transamerica Corporation called on the administration to act quickly.

It was a surprising statement from the man who once was Mr. Roosevelt's principal advocate in the inner councils of big business, and who in 1935 pleaded with his fellow bankers at their New Orleans convention to co-operate with the government.

Giannini's "disillusionment" with the New Deal dates from his appearances in Washington less than a year ago, when he was named to the Exchange Commission's investigation of his Bank of America.

358-MILLION FUND FOR DEFENSE VOTED

Measure Authorizes Fleet of 6,000 Warplanes and Anti-Aircraft Guns.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(UP)—Congress today voted President Roosevelt a powerful foreign policy weapon when it completed action on his $358,000,000 emergency defense bill and sent it to the White House for signature.

The measure authorizes a fleet of 6,000 planes for the army air corps, the most potent aerial force in the nation's history; calls for new and stronger fortifications around the Panama Canal, bolsters seacoast and inland defenses, increases the size of the army, and equips it with vast supplies of vital equipment such as automatic rifles, anti-aircraft guns and artillery.

Final approval came unexpectedly after senate and house conferees adjusted differences in the versions passed by the two chambers, and sent the measure to the floor for concurrence. The senate quickly accepted the conference report and in less than 15 minutes the house followed suit. Almost simultaneously the house approved a $188,000,000 deficiency bill, three-quarters of which is for defense purposes.

Persistent Pup Pauprinted For Not Knowing Own Name

LOS ANGELES, March 22.—(UP)—A bedraggled pup answering to the names of "Runt," "Fido" and "Teddy" with equal alacrity, was arrested, pauprinted and remanded to jail today for refusing to remain out of the new federal building. Unless his owner appears within three days, the dog will be "sentenced" to the identification ward of the pound.

within the destination rate-making territory.

During hearings on this measure many witnesses objected to it because it directed the commission to revise their present rate schedules to eliminate alleged discrimination against the south, southwest and other non-official territory.

Directs Investigation.
Representative Ramspeck expressed confidence that congress will look with more favor on his resolution inasmuch as it calls for a nation-wide investigation of freight rates and does not direct the commission to take affirmative action without first investigating.

REFORESTATION URGED BY RIVERS

Cites Abandoned Cotton Land in Speech.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
WASHINGTON, March 22.—Reforestation of some 40,000,000 acres of abandoned cotton land in Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi was urged by Governor Rivers, of Georgia, in an address before the American Forestry Association here today.

"Only an optimism of the highest type can hope that this vast acreage will ever grow cotton again," Governor Rivers declared. "The main hope of the region is that its abandoned cotton lands be given over to the production of timber resources."

The Georgia executive stressed the importance of fire control in conserving timber areas, declaring the problem one of particular importance in the south.

RED CROSS REPORTS 1,089 ENROLLMENTS

Eleven Firms and Organizations Make 100 Per Cent Contributions.

Red Cross roll call workers yesterday reported 1,089 enrollments and eleven 100 per cent contributions by firms and organizations, as the 22d annual drive for membership continued.

Reporting 100 per cent were Brown Insurance Company, Dixie Culvert and Metal Company, Piedmont Hotel, American Savings Bank, Robinson-Humphrey, Howell & Tucker, H. C. Hopkins & Co., Miller Bryant, Pierce Co., Sam T. Maddox, the Trust Company of Georgia and the Walton buildings.

A special radio program last night presented Jere A. Wells, county roll call chairman, and three of his members, Mayor George W. Harris, College Park; Ed. L. Humphreys, East Point; and Lamar Miller, Center Hills. Wells reported that nearly all rural and suburban chairmen had been appointed, and that their teams had begun a canvass of the entire county.

PICK JACKSONVILLE FOR HUGE AIR BASE

Hepburn Board Recommends It 'Unanimously, Strongly.'

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP) A naval board "unanimously and strongly" recommended Jacksonville, Fla., today as the site of a $15,000,000 air base.

Reaffirming a former report, the group—commonly known as the "Hepburn board"—cited seven reasons for choosing the north Florida city over Miami, its second choice, and a list of other contenders termed unacceptable.

One by one, the report eliminated various locations along the Atlantic coast—Key West, Fort Lauderdale, Fernandina, Brunswick, Savannah, Parris Island, Charleston. The choice, it said, narrowed to Miami and Jacksonville.

For favoring the latter, it cited these reasons:

1. The immediate availability of the site and its suitability for immediate construction.

2. Its comparative freedom from hurricanes.

3. Its superior transportation facilities.

4. The absence of local objections.

5. Its comparative freedom from water traffic interference.

6. The moderate prospective cost.

The officers said Miami was well placed strategically, but cited a hurricane danger.

LONE AIRCRAFT CARRIER BID TOTALS $31,800,000

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP)—A lone bid submitted today on construction of the 20,000-ton aircraft carrier Hornet indicated the navy's seventh and newest carrier would be the most costly vessel of the type yet undertaken.

The bid, submitted by the Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, was $31,800,000, subject to adjustments if labor and material costs mount during the 34 months expected to be required to build the ship.

The same company recently completed the carriers Yorktown and Enterprise, of the same general size and type, for about $24,000,000 each, not including armor plate, guns and shells.

BLAND WILL LEAVE MONEY TO CHURCH

Rite Hospital, University of South Given Bequests Under Provisions.

The Episcopal Cathedral of St. Philip, the Scottish Rite Hospital and the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., yesterday were listed among the beneficiaries of the will of George A. Bland, executive of the Retail Credit Company.

Disposing of an estate estimated at $500,000, largely in stock of the Retail Credit Company, the will names Mrs. Helen De Treville Bland, his widow, and the Trust Company of Georgia as executors. It was filed Wednesday for probate in the Fulton county ordinary's court.

St. Philip's will get $10,000 to apply on a $22,500 debt, and the Scottish Rite hospital and the university get $5,000 each.

Individual bequests include a $20,000 annuity to his sister, Mrs. Gussie DuBose; $2,000 each to Mrs. Helen Kennedy and Mrs. Bertille Bruce and $1,000 each to Robert DuBose Jr., George DuBose, C. C. Beck Jr., Austin Beck and Kenneth Beck.

All personal property goes to Mrs. Bland, with the remainder of the estate being held in trust by executors for the benefit of the widow and Mr. Bland's mother, Mrs. Cornelia Bland. On the widow's death, provisions is made for gradual liquidation of the estate in favor of the son, George A. Bland Jr.

BURNS TO DEATH IN FLAMING AUTO

foul play, the body bearing no marks of violence.

W. E. Benefield, agent for Reliance Insurance Company, of Pittsburgh, said Williams had a policy with his company which he applied for on February 20 which would pay $8,000 in case of accidental death. He said it was a $2,500 straight life policy with double indemnity clause which would pay $5,000 in case of accidental death. Policy also carried a "rider" which would pay $3,000 extra in case accidental death was proved.

Williams was last seen alive about 10 o'clock yesterday morning by Sergeant Haltott J. Pride, of company headquarters, 24th infantry, on duty at the reservation logging camp at Ocala.

Sergeant Pride told investigators Williams called on him shortly after 10 o'clock and attempted to sell him an automobile. He said they chatted for about five minutes and then Williams left.

Williams left a Columbus agency at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, where he had hired an automobile, positively identified as the one which was burned.

The first puzzling torch death in this area occurred last February 12 when the body of Lieutenant William D. Davis, Fort Benning, was found in his burned automobile in Alabama, across the Chattahoochee river from the reservation.

A Lee county (Alabama) dairyman and his negro helper await trial in connection with the Davis slaying. The officer had been hatched to death, according to police, prior to being found in the burned car.

GENERAL DISCUSSES FLOOD 'CUTS' VALUE

Crests at Vicksburg Lowered Seven to Nine Feet Since 1932.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP) Brigadier General Harley Ferguson told the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association today that cutoffs had lowered flood crests at Vicksburg, Miss., seven to nine feet since 1932.

Ferguson, president of the Mississippi River Commission, discussed the success of the 13 cutoffs of the Mississippi river south of Arkansas City to reduce the distance to the gulf and accelerate the flow of flood waters.

He said the flood flows at Arkansas City had been lowered 13 to 15 feet since the cutoffs were initiated and that there had been a lowering at Vicksburg and Arkansas City of about three feet "during the last two years alone."

America's Finest Rich Whiskey... America's Finest Mild Whiskey

It's a matter of personal taste. If you like hearty highballs, you are more apt to favor Seagram's 7 Crown—a richer flavored whiskey. If you like your drinks "lighter-tasting", you will probably choose Seagram's 5 Crown, a mild whiskey with a soft bouquet and a pleasingly delicate flavor.

Seagram offers you a choice. Whichever you prefer, "7" or "5", it will give you a superior feeling to know that you are serving "America's Finest".

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 23, 1939.

FOR NATIONAL GOOD

The meeting in Atlanta of the Southeastern Governors' Conference has served to emphasize, once again, that the things for which this group is striving are things which, while based upon sectional problems, are nevertheless in the forefront of reforms which must be made if the nation as a whole is to realize that prosperity which is the national goal.

That the discriminatory railroad freight rates, against the south and west, have been detrimental to the economy of the country as a whole cannot be denied by anyone with any degree of observation ability. These rates have penalized the south ever since the War Between the States but they have, far worse, restricted the market for goods produced and manufactured anywhere in the nation. For they have contributed heavily to that low income average in the south which has made this section a poor market for any goods, regardless of where produced.

No nation can prosper as it should, in any part, while there is any section handicapped and penalized by the short-sighted greed of other sections. A body is only as healthy as its weakest part, whether it be an economic body or a physical one.

There is strong hope, now, that the rate injustice will be removed. Commissioner Lee, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who conducted hearings on the governors' case for reduction of specific commodities, gave tremendous support to the entire contention in his report favoring adjustment of these particular rates. It remains, of course, for the ICC as a body to concur in that report.

Continuance of the emphasis placed upon this issue cannot fail to bring such overwhelming popular demand for its rectification that it will be no longer possible to refuse. Mrs. Roosevelt is the latest to draw attention to the injustice, following her husband, the President, who referred to it in his message transmitting the Alldredge TVA report to congress. Mrs. Roosevelt, in her column "My Day," of recent date, said that the one complaint she heard on a recent trip through Texas was on the freight rate differentials and, while admitting she knows little of the intricacies of the problem, nevertheless feels that "this theme song has been sung for a long time and the rest of the country should wake up to the fact that one of their sister states feels a real sense of grievance. That isn't healthy and should not be allowed to continue."

Other evils which the Southeastern Governors seek to rectify all are concerned with conditions which injure the welfare of the entire nation by creating enmity between states or imposing unfair economic handicaps upon specific regions.

For instance, in resolutions adopted here on Tuesday, the growing tendency to set up camouflaged tariff walls between the states was condemned as a hindrance to interstate commerce, as a discouragement to tourist travel and as a handicap to that friendliness which should exist between neighbor states.

Likewise special notice was taken of the prohibitive tax levied by Wisconsin against oleomargarine, which is largely made of cottonseed oil, a southern product. The wrongs done by this tax have been too frequently listed to require reiteration here.

In conclusion, there was irrefutable logic in the appeal of the Governors for the support of organized labor in the freight rate fight. For, as they stated, if the discriminatory differentials are not eliminated, there is a very serious threat to the efforts for uniformity in wage rates and hours of work, sought under the wages and hours law.

If other sections of the country, particularly the industrial east and New England, could only be induced to gain the long vision and to consider the good of the nation instead of their own immediate interests, all, including themselves, would eventually benefit immeasurably by the adoption of those reforms sought by the Southeastern Governors' Conference.

We can remember well—before Goebbels came along—when Little Poison was an out-fighter named Waver.

Having corrected every injustice to Germany

With the A. A. U. requirements seen to, a new world record for the mile could be set at any time. Give Hitler an inch.

WAGE AND HOUR LAWS IN THE STATES

Last summer, when the minimum wage-hour law was passed by congress—a law affecting labor only as it relates to the production of goods moving in interstate commerce—it was thought similar legislation would be rushed through the law-making bodies of the various states. Nothing of the sort has happened. Although many bills have been given consideration none has been enacted into law up to this time.

Wage-hour legislation in the states, of course, is nothing new. Twenty-five states already have such laws. Most of them, however, apply exclusively to women and children. They are still more or less in the experimental stage. Present state laws are of two different types. Statutes in Arkansas, Nevada and South Dakota set forth the minimum wage to be paid. An industrial welfare board has the power to revise or adjust it. In the true sense it isn't fixed by law. In other states wages and hours are actually set up by boards and commissions. These bodies also have the power to revise the scales from time to time to coincide with changing economic conditions, such as fluctuating markets and cost of living.

Experience thus far attained would seem to indicate the impracticability of setting up minimum wages and hours by local statute to become effective on a given date and to remain unchanged until modified by legislative action. There are too many factors created by economic law, within the states, to be taken into consideration.

During the last six months 43 state legislatures have been in session. In 24 of these bodies wage-hour legislation was introduced. In seven instances the proposed law was killed or allowed to expire in committee. In some cases bills were withdrawn or defeated when brought to a vote. In the others no time could be spared from other business to vote upon them.

The feeling now prevails that there is too much danger in delegating power to make or break industry and labor to politically appointed and dominated bodies. Such delegation of power would actually point the way to never-ending strife. Every little cloud on the horizon would be a signal for hastily raising the ceiling over working hours or lowering the floor under wages to "strengthen" the economic structure against some imaginary storm. Industrial peace, under such circumstances, would go out of the window.

TAKE UP THE SLACK

Colonel F. C. Harrington, Works Progress administrator, has announced that 400,000 persons will be removed from the rolls of the agency during the week beginning April 3 unless congress appropriates $150,000,000 to carry work relief through to July 1. After July 1 is yet another story.

As a block, 400,000 seems rather large. Broken down into local groups, it is not so formidable. Georgia is scheduled to lose 9,500 persons, less than three per cent of the population of the city of Atlanta alone. New York city will lose 25,000 persons out of a total population of more than 7,000,000.

The problem, then, would be one for localities. It is a challenge that must be met sooner or later and the quicker it is faced, the better it can be handled. Each city will know exactly the number of relief recipients removed from the rolls and will know how many should be reabsorbed into private business.

If this absorption problem is not met, then argument for enormous relief expenditures is only strengthened and a return of the 400,000 to non-productive relief work may soon be expected. Normally, the business increase anticipated this spring will take up the slack, but some gauge should be provided which will demonstrate that for the 400,000 persons taken from the relief rolls, 400,000 or more have been taken into private business. If this is not done, the agitation for increased expenditures may be expected to redouble.

The reductions have been ordered to dramatize the need for additional funds. Of course, the money is required if the rolls are to be maintained at their present high level. But in another sense they constitute a challenge that business should, and must some day, meet. There could be no better way of meeting it than through a definite, locally-directed private re-employment campaign. Some sacrifices may be required, but they would be infinitesimal when measured against the burden of enormous relief expenditures.

As reprinted in a late Ohio newspaper, the oath of allegiance calls for "a nation indivisible." That would be Czechoslovakia.

If it is true that Einstein knows a law that clears up everything, and creates no more jobs, we believe congress should pass it.

NEW EMPHASIS ON MERIT

(From The Washington Post)
Too little attention has been given to the hopeful steps taken during recent weeks toward creation of a career service for the federal government. If these efforts succeed, they will mean a virtual revolution in the government's personnel system.

As it has operated to date in this country the merit system has served chiefly to protect federal jobs from the spoilsman. That, of course, is an important accomplishment. But it does little to guarantee a high degree of efficiency in the government service. The adoption of more modern recruiting and promotion methods is long overdue.

President Roosevelt is manifesting a great deal of interest in modernization of the merit system. Both his special committee to set up standards for a real career service and his Council of Personnel Administration may be relied upon to recommend the best practices in personnel management.

In brief, it will be the task of these two agencies to introduce a greater element of merit into the merit system. In these days of widespread governmental activities, calling for technical skill of many varieties as well as administrative ability, it is not enough to abolish political tests of fitness. Ways and means must be found to bring into the federal service men and women specially trained for and adapted to the tasks assigned to them. And they must be given assurance of fair treatment, of advancement in accord with the quality of service rendered and of sufficient pay to make a career in governmental work attractive.

Few, if any, assignments in Washington hold greater possibilities for public service than these

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

NEW DEALERS ELATED WASHINGTON, March 22.—To the New Dealers who supported his candidacy, the President could not have picked a better time to nominate SEC Chairman William O. Douglas to the supreme court. They know well that the President most accurately reflects his personal feelings by the manner of his appointment, and they are frankly elated that White House approval is placed at this particular moment on one of their number who publicly opposed appeasement on one fundamental of the New Deal.

Bill Douglas last week vigorously attacked the country's securities exchanges for advocating basic changes in SEC law, and, as the most recent vote to Douglas' character and to the significance of his appointment, it is appropriate to review briefly the background of the event.

NO APPEASEMENT Back in 1934, when the securities exchange act was being shoved through congress, the New York Stock Exchange clamored for softening amendments. The young men watching the act for the President, who are the powerful New Dealers of today, used to seek advice in the "bureau of education" of Vice President John W. Garner. Garner always told them: "Don't change a line." The Garner slogan has been the New Dealers' slogan since then, and the SEC is their most cherished symbol of New Deal reform.

Until representatives of the stock exchanges met in Washington last week, there had been no serious move to change SEC law. The conference under the leadership of the New York Stock Exchange approved demands for "clarification" of the section of the exchange act forbidding market manipulations and for relaxation of the rules against insider trading. Bill Douglas was put nicely on the spot because, at his insistent urging, the New York exchange had reorganized itself with a "liberal" board of governors and a "liberal" president. An era of good feeling between Washington and Wall Street had been well publicized. And here, in the minds of the uninformed at least, was a test of Washington's willingness to co-operate with the financial interests.

BRIEF ENCOUNTER The encounter was brief. When the delegation from the exchange confederates met the President, they asked sharply: "Well, have they brought their umbrellas?" An advance copy of the demands had been slipped to him the day before, and they had scarcely been laid on his desk before he hurled them back in the faces of the brokers, with the comment: "Opening things up so the boys in the street can have a party isn't going to help recovery."

Douglas' stinging rebuff to the exchanges should not be taken to mean that he is a wild-eyed radical anxious to crack down on business. The fact is that his research staff had studied for some time the changes proposed by Wall Street and was convinced, whether rightly or wrongly, that they would mean a return to the abuses of 1929. Douglas himself had analyzed the new feeling among the brokers and sincerely believed that the proposals merely offered another sign that Wall Street felt the New Deal was politically licked and was therefore determined to abandon co-operation. He quickly determined that he wanted no part in such appeasement.

A SIMPLE STORY The story of how Douglas was selected for because, as in the case of Felix Frankfurter, at one point the President almost named someone else. Soon after Justice Brandeis retired, the New Dealers settled on Douglas as a man well qualified for the court, with safe liberal ideas who could satisfy the President's desire to appoint someone "with a western viewpoint." Attorney General Frank Murphy, who had the job of examining the qualifications of the candidates, found Douglas eminently fitted and soon became his most active sponsor.

When the President returned from his recent sea trip, Murphy strongly urged the President to choose Douglas, who he pointed out would give the high court the same sort of knowledge of corporate finance as Justice Brandeis had. But the President seemed inclined toward Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington. Schwellenbach is a 200 per cent New Dealer and was supported for the place by the more radical New Dealers and by the CIO. The President was warned that Schwellenbach's appointment would arouse great protest, while the Douglas choice would be well received in the senate. Messages to the White House in Douglas' behalf from such prominent senators as William E. Borah, of Idaho, during the last few days decided the matter.

Are strutting all around,
Like dumb and driven cattle,
They know not where they're bound.

Corralled now for slaughter

Wretched little fellows,
Fodder for the guns,
Helpless slaves for trenches—
Yet all are mothers' sons.

"Wuthering Heights"

Noticing that Emily Bronte's classic story of the Yorkshire moors, "Wuthering Heights," is now appearing in daily installments in this paper, recollections of a visit to the ancient Bronte home and to the farmhouse built of stone which was the scene of the novel are awakened.

It was in the summer of 1925. En route to visit an aunt whose home was high on those moors, we stopped at the little village where the father of the Bronte sisters was curate at the old church. Nowadays the chief claim to fame for the place is the fact that the Brontes once lived there.

We went inside a little museum, where relics of the Bronte girls are kept. We saw the old hats and dresses they wore, the little ornaments from their home and innumerable other things.

We saw, too, the original manuscript of "Wuthering Heights." That, itself, was unbelievable, almost. Either that anyone could write it, in the first place, or that a publisher could be found who would accept such "copy." For it was written in a leather-bound book so tiny it was not more than two inches in any dimension, height, breadth or thickness. The writing, in ink, was so fine it required a magnifying glass to decipher the words. Reminded me more than anything else, of those "stunt" writings, like inscribing the words of the Lord's Prayer upon the head of a pin. Yet there it was.

The Rock
In the Stream.
As we walked that afternoon, way, way up on the moors toward the original of "Wuthering Heights," we came to a stream, perhaps 50 feet in width, gurgling and singing as it poured among the boulders. The water was broad stepping stones by which to cross, natural formations of the rock.

And, right in the center of the stream, was one great rock which had the shape of an armchair. It was almost perfect, made so by nature and the erosion of the ages.

They told me that Emily Bronte wrote "Wuthering Heights," seated in this stone chair, midway across this little river. I sat in it, for awhile, with the faint hope that, possibly, I could catch some faint spark of the genius that was hers. At least, enjoy a trifle of the same inspiration.

Then we went on to the farmhouse, still occupied by a family which operates that farm as a building that looks as though it would stand forever.

The walls are of stone, apparently a couple of feet thick. It stands on the highest point of that bleak countryside, subject to all the winds that blow and to the cold that must bite to the very bone in winter time.

Those Yorkshire moors are strange, anyway. Rolling hills that seem to mount ever higher and higher, they are entirely bare of trees. Covered with heather, and with little footpaths, worn by the countless feet of untold generations, that wind around and over the gently rising hills. You feel, when you reach such a summit as "Wuthering Heights," that you are upon the roof of the world, far above all ordinary existence.

Far off, miles to the south, there is a highway that, on a clear day, can just be seen where it mounts over hills. It is so high the atmosphere is rarefied and they do say that the number of automobiles that catch fire on that road is something to give insurance companies the jitters.

You can see them burning, from the farmhouse windows, at night. It is told that automobile owners who wish to collect fire insurance on their machines, bring them to that road and race the motors, a little, just to tempt fiery fate.

But, to revert to the Bronte sisters. There were three of them. Anne, Charlotte and Emily. All three were successful authors, though Emily and Charlotte are probably the best known today. Their first book was a collection of poems, published jointly by all three. Then, each of them wrote a novel. Emily's was "Wuthering Heights," and Anne's was "Agnes Grey." The latter was promptly published, but Charlotte's "Professor" didn't have such good luck. However, Charlotte finally broke into print with "Jane Eyre." In fact, due to printing delays, "Jane Eyre" was actually placed on sale some two months before the other two.

Charlotte was born in 1816. Emily in 1818 and Anne in 1820.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Russian NEW YORK, March 22.—Politics and military necessity may compel France and Britain to fight on Russia's side and this country to help them, first with supplies and later perhaps with soldiers and naval power. But, whatever happens, the Russians and the American agents and sympathizers should not be permitted to get away with the current loud pretense that Russia is a democracy or any less hateful to this country than Nazi Germany. The only difference, as far as the United States is concerned, is that Germany and Italy are bulging with muscle just now and therefore are out marauding, whereas Russia, having more territory than she can efficiently use or well police, and being pretty well shot by internal conspiracies and dumb incompetence, can point to a recent record of decent, unselfish behavior toward the neighbors.

Hitler and, with him, Mussolini, have put themselves on the urgent list and will have to be attended to first, but Russia's record, as of the time when there was no German menace, was no more friendly than Nazi-Fascism to the American form of government or the peace and security of this nation.

It might be remembered also that the Czechoslovak democracy, which Americans mourn with pure motives, and the same starry-eyed idealism that drew the United States into the World War, stood between the two kinds of Bolshevism, Red and Brown, and wanted no more of the one than of the other. Russia liked the little republic only as a line of defense against Germany and forebore to destroy it by poison only because Czechoslovakia served to keep Hitler at a distance. Czechoslovakia was not a Bolshevik nation, red or brown, and Russia's democratic feeling for her did not impel her to do anything rash.

Might Overcome

In the event of a general brawl this democracy, having fought on the side of the Czar in the last one, might overcome its objections to teaming up with the Bolsheviks. It should come to that. But there is no more excuse for believing that Soviet Russia is a democracy than there was for thinking that of Czarist Russia. Nobody did think that of Czarist Russia, but still the Americans fought on that side, handicapped to the extent of their ability, incidentally, by the very bolos who now would call this nation comrade.

There is still something very mysterious and suspicious about the Russian-German equation, for they are almost identical in their own qualities, in their common unity toward this country's freedom and form of government, and their hatred of religion. National rivalry is their only point of conflict and they easily could make a deal to exchange the things which Hitler wants for those which he is prepared to trade and Russia needs. And, as Demaree Bess recently pointed out in the Saturday Evening Post, while the democratic nations have been striving generously to find asylums for the victims of Hitler's savagery, Russia, with much spare room and plenty with great need of the intelligence which the refugees have to offer, has extended no welcome to the outcasts. Certainly those in this country who have condemned Loyalist Spain as Bolshevik with no discount or allowance would find themselves uncomfortable in a line-up with Russia against Hitler, even though France and Britain were also on the team. They will exert a strong pull against that course.

Bolos Need In this situation,

Watching the American bolos will need close watching and the propaganda for democracy must be examined for Communist taint. They have lately adopted Abraham Lincoln and blown kisses at the American condemners, but only as propaganda and will be found on inspection that they have merely set themselves certain limited objectives on the way to the creation here of the same dictatorship that exists in Russia and Germany. Never have they renounced their ultimate intentions toward the American form of government, and the constitution would be used merely as a tool for its own destruction, a method identical with that of the Nazis of the anti-American Bund.

As silly and horrible as anything that any lunatic could imagine would be the spectacle of this democracy fighting economically or in the field to protect the Russian dictatorship from the German dictatorship and preserve the Russian oppressor of the Ukraine against the challenge of a rival with identical motives, methods and ideas.

Landon's Still Running

Americans, sightseeing in Guatemala, were surprised recently to see a gaudily painted sound truck with the legend: Landon and Knox.

They debated whether they had come across an overzealous campaign speaker, whether there had been a Republican error in locating the deep south, perhaps the wrong turn at a detour or simply a desire to join the United States, most tobacco company employee came through with an explanation. The company had purchased the truck and merely had failed to repaint it.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE FUTURE DECIDES In De Segur's memoirs one may read a story of Napoleon as follows: "On reaching the Isle of Poplars, the First Consul stopped at Rousseau's grave. 'It would have been better for the repose of France if that man had never lived,' said he. 'And why, Citizen Consul?'"

"Because he is the man who made the French Revolution." "It seems to me that you, Citizen Consul, cannot complain of the French Revolution." "Well, the future must decide whether it would not have been better for the repose of the whole world if neither myself nor Rousseau had ever lived."

"He then resumed his walk, in reverie." "There is no real answer to that as yet. He left laws. He restored religion. He restored France. A million men or more had died because of him."

Robert Ingersoll went and looked at that amazing tomb there in Paris and concluded he would rather have been a French peasant, sitting in the doorway of his cottage with the grapes growing purple above the door; and with his grandchildren about his knees, than to have been the one who sleeps in the great sarcophagus of gilt and gold.

The scales do not balance. There would have been a revolution in France. Had it not been Jean Jacques Rousseau there would have been some other philosopher and writer of pamphlets. And there would have been some other captain of artillery to fire the guns there at the Church of St. Roch.

Now, the future must decide whether or not it would have been better for the repose of the world if another strong man had not lived. Much good came of the French Revolution. Human liberties, freedom and much that is fine and good in the world came out of the French Revolution and the one in the American colonies. They were of different types but they were worth while.

It is possible that out of all the suffering and cruelty, out of the tyrannies and suppression of human liberties and rights imposed by the leader of the German Reich there may come a reaction which will give to the world the greatest impetus civilization has had.

The future must decide.

HIS STAR RISES

Hitler's star is rising. I doubt, really, if it has reached its peak. I do not think there will be a war, unless some precipitate action brings it such as an assassination or a clash of troops. (There was the assassination at Sarajevo in 1914. And the Battle of Gettysburg was fought where it was because a troop of Confederate soldiers going into the city to hunt for shoes accidentally encountered a troop of Blue.)

I believe Hitler could take Poland and Rumania and that neither England nor France would fight unless one of those two nations strongly opposes Germany and holds her off for a week or so. This is not a pleasant belief, but I think it true. Hitler has the most trained men and the most planes. He is better organized. England and France have not sold the Fuehrer on their new solid front. He does not believe it. The French and the English themselves do not believe in themselves. They know that England is not prepared. France is. They know England could not put many men in the field. It would be France doing the great dying and English the great paying. France was ready to go when the first crisis of Czechoslovakia came. But England could not put many divisions. Plus the fleet. France was unwilling to sacrifice her army. Germany knew it.

Hitler knows the German people do not want war. He knows what privations they would suffer. He doesn't want war. He knows he can get away with his gamble so long as there is no precipitate upsetting of the cards he plays.

Memel may be all this spring. There are the spring and summer crops to gather. He has arranged for oil from Rumania and grain. If it looks easy in Poland he will take the corridor and let it go at that until fall. By autumn England will be strong. Unless there is a Brutus dagger or an assassin's bullet or some caprice of destiny, there is not likely to be war.

THE REAL ASSET

Strength is a comforting asset. There has been peace in the North and South American continents, excepting of course the few revolutions of the Central American republics, because the United States is a strong nation.

One reason I so firmly believe Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy is correct is that Germany and Japan and Italy all three utter such loud shrieks of anger when he takes a stand. Germany especially grows so rabid that one just knows without guessing that they are hit where it hurts. They know they haven't fooled the United States or its administration. They know we are going ahead getting strong.

I rather imagine we may have kept the European peace. Despite our neutrality act, Germany has never been quite sure what to do about the United States of America. The weight of America waiting to be dropped in the scales has been a great influence for peace.

If the neutrality act is amended to permit purchases with cash, said purchases to be carried away in the ships of the buying nations and not in American bottoms, it will be another aid to peace. We may as well be realistic, to resolve to keep out of it but to give what material assistance we can to those whose form of government we favor. So long, of course, as they come and get it.

We ought to know by now that Hitler's word or bond is not worth considering. The English have learned it. The French always knew it.

We can fight economically by keeping a flood of German goods from the newly captured industries from our markets and by maintaining our foreign policy as it is. The fact it brings forth such intense anger demonstrates its undeniable fitness.

Captain Kidd's System Couldn't Work in a World That Has Outgrown Him

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

The great and little troubles that fall to the lot of man are seldom the result of chance. When trouble arrives, we can look back over the path by which it came and discover what started it, and nine times in ten we find that we ourselves invited it.

The explanation, of course, is ignorance. A man doesn't tamper with the hind leg of a mule if he knows what is coming. When great troubles are invited by a ruler or the leader of a class or race, he usually is prompted by ancient ambitions, ideas and mental processes that worked nicely in a more primitive world but have been outgrown these many years.

Throughout the greater part of man's history, any ambitious ruler with a first-class army could invade his neighbor's territory, butcher the citizens, and collect enough loot to pay a profit on the adventure. Whole populations, including women and children, were "put to the sword."

State Garden Tour in Savannah Today

Visits Started Yesterday in Thomasville, Will Include Augusta, Macon, Milledgeville, Atlanta.

By YOLANDE GWIN.

Hundreds of garden-minded Georgians and visitors from near-by states begin the second day of the third annual pilgrimage to noted Georgia gardens and estates today in historic Savannah.

The tour to the homes and gardens of the Garden Club of Georgia opened yesterday with visits to famous estates and homes in Thomasville, famed as the City of Roses. The pilgrimage will be climaxed in Atlanta April 1-3 when members of the Eggleston Hospital Auxiliary conduct a tour of 16 Atlanta gardens listed as a part of the state-wide pilgrimage.

Estates visited yesterday at Thomasville, where beautiful spring-like weather prevailed, were "Greenwood," the estate of Mrs. Payne Whitney, of New York; "Pebble Hill," property of Miss Pansy Ireland, of Cleveland; "Melrose" belonging to Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hanna, of Cleveland; "Millpond," owned by the Wade family of Cleveland; "Winstead," the estate of Mrs. Coburn Haskell, and the homes and gardens of the Misses Wright, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. James Gibbs and Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Ausley.

The dignity and charm of colonial homes and gardens and the majestic beauty of the water front gardens will be viewed by visitors in Savannah today and tomorrow. Listed among homes and gardens to be visited are "Wild Heron Plantation," the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Shelby Myrick, on the coastal highway toward Brunswick. In the city of Savannah are the gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Adler and Mrs. E. S. Trosdal. On the Montgomery road, "Tidewater," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Clapp, will be visited, and at Grimbles Point, Mr. and Mrs. George Garmany and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Solomon will open their waterfront gardens.

Vernon River Walk at White Bluff combines the gardens of Mrs. Clarence Anderson, Mrs. Frank Chisholm and "Ovon Hall," the home of Mrs. J. A. P. Crisfield. "Wormsloe Plantation," the ancestral home of Mrs. Craig Barrow completes the finely selected list of gardens along the inland waterways.

For the first time this year a number of old homes in Savannah will be open for the pilgrimage visitors. Six private homes and the Colonial Dames' house completes the list. The homes to be opened are those of Mrs. John Barton Seymour, Mrs. Snowden Marshall, Miss Maria Minnis, Mrs. Peter Meldrum, Mrs. Randolph Anderson and Mrs. J. K. Livingston. The Colonial Dames' house was the former home of Juliette Low, founder of the Girl Scouts of America.

Saturday and Sunday will find the pilgrimage visitors in Augusta to view the gardens of unsurpassed beauty.

Augusta Visit.
On Saturday, the first day in Augusta, the pilgrimage members will visit "Morningside," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Bourne; "Green Court," the Henry P. Crowell place; "Highgate," the estate of Mrs. Henry Cohen; "Mianostia," Mrs. Chester Korn's estate; "Salubritas Hall," the place of Mrs. John W. Herbert; the gardens of Mrs. William B. White, and two homes, "Azalea Cottage," the home of Mrs. Thomas Barrett Jr., and "Meadow Garden," the home of George Walton, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The second day of the stop at Augusta, on Sunday, the pilgrimage will visit Goshen Plantation, the estate of Mrs. Joseph McK. Speer, a former president of the Garden Club of Georgia; the gardens of Mrs. Harry Albright, Mrs. Harry Chafee; the Thomas gardens; "Manoir Fleuri," the gardens of Mrs. Robert Reese; "Sandy Acres," the home and gardens of Mrs. Rodney Cohen and the home of Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Murphy. In Milledgeville on March 26, six of the old homes of that early capital of Georgia and three gardens will be open for the visitors and in Macon on March 28, two ante-bellum homes and 10 gardens will be shown.

The homes and gardens to be shown in Milledgeville include the old executive mansion; "Beaumont," the old Furman home; "The Cedars," the old Beall home; General Dole's home, the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bone, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Jordan, Mrs. E. D. Napier and the gardens of Miss Mary Cline and the Sunrose and Sunset gardens of Mrs. Nellie Womack Hines.

The Macon tour includes gardens of Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Holliday, Mrs. R. G. Casson and Haber-

PICK AND PAT PLAY AT ROXY THEATER

Won Fame as 'Molasses and January.'

Pick and Pat, those comedians who as "Molasses and January," on Captain Henry's Showboat program, flitted in one move from Georgia to stardom, are names headlined in the new show opening at the Roxy theater today. It is their first stage appearance in six years.

More recently starred on the Model Modern Minstrel Hour, Pick and Pat. Pat Padgett and Pick Malone, in private life, will present a medley of their best radio shows and will appear with G. E. Foster's 16 Roxyettes.

Still another dial-attraction is on the new Roxy show. Known to dial-twisters as the "Radio Ramblers," Al Rice, Irving Lane and Sam Vine present a comedy show in which they "take off" to use an old expression, most of those air-stars who are by-words of the air-ways. Eddie Shayne and Charlotte Armstrong are a ballroom dance team with the energy of circus acrobats. The result is show-stopping grace with plenty of action and style. The Royal Rollers skate to chill your blood, but think enough of their dog "Mickey" to split billing with him.

On the screen the Jones appear in "Borrowing Trouble."

and Mrs. T. Charlton Hudson.

"Hills and Dales" in LaGrange is the home and estate of Mr. and Mrs. Fuller Callaway Jr., and "Banks Haven" is the lakeside estate of Mr. and Mrs. William Banks, on the highway to Newnan. "Beach Haven," the Rowland estate on the banks of the Oconee river, will be open to the visitors on the tour.

Climaxing the tour will be the visit to Atlanta on April 1, when the estates of Mr. and Mrs. Ben T. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes Perdue, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kiser will be visited, and also the antebellum home of the Gus Tolsons in near-by Roswell.

On April 2, the interior of the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thornton will be visited as will be the gardens and homes of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Abreu, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Emmert and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Harrison. On the last day of the pilgrimage, April 3, the homes and gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fess will be shown, as will be the gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Willet, Mr. and Mrs. Charles King, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Black Jr. and Cator Woolford.

"In ranks and squadrons and right form of war."

One of our happiest memories of the late World War was the time when we served our country as No. 3 man in the rear rank of our squad and the command was "Squads right!" There was all the glory of geometry in the execution of that movement from that position, and to complete it was to be one who had made a fine art of a great science. "At the command 'squads right!'" we can remember our drill-master teaching us, "the No. 3 man in the rear rank moves straight forward until opposite his place in the new line, at which point he makes right turns and comes into place." To move forward when all the other men in the squad (saving only No. 4) were shifting and turning, to complete your part in complicated movement with one magnificent and unqualified right angle—that was to be a soldier and a poet, too.

Now, we are told, they are about to abolish "squads right." Modern warfare, they say, calls for a less complicated move and modern roads need a different formation. This may be all very true, but so far as we are concerned war is going to be a pretty hellish affair without "squads right."

"He went into the house. There were no lights. He turned on the lamp in the sitting room. The telephone rang. He answered it and it was nothing. There was a letter on the table. It was from Grace. He picked it up. It felt heavy. . . . This doesn't happen to be anybody in particular writing but it could be any one of a number of modern authors belonging to the school Hemmingway started which has been worked to death for its novelty value. Try reading any of these authors out loud and you can put yourself to sleep right away, and your listeners, too. Some say the style is jazz-age, one-one-one stuff. Others say it dates even further back. It goes back to the nursery and the first reader, they say, when we were taught to read, very slowly, and with a finger on each letter: "The apple is red. The table is round. This is a cat."

"Many years ago," writes Dr. James C. Chisholm, of Demopolis, Ala., "old Joe Cannon, who was the leader of the Republican party and speaker of the house of representatives, said 'you can always depend on the Democratic party making damned fools of themselves at the psychological moment. It seems that that time has arrived. What a pity!'"

Life is so complicated these days and there is so much of it that the only way to keep one's self coherent is through use of labels and containers, through holding on to general propositions which include specific propositions, through having a word or words that sum up more than can be remembered or digested in separate parts, through having drawers or boxes into which to put things. Poetry provides these services, in this column's opinion. Poetry, and slogans, catchwords, battle cries, mottoes, alliterations,

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

"NOT LAZY . . ."

Dr. W. C. Taylor, Latin American secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of Southern Baptists, in his admirable address at the Baptist Women's Missionary Union convention in Atlanta Tuesday evening of this week, took as his theme the intriguing passage of Scripture which was emblazoned across the front of the spacious auditorium of the First Baptist church, "His Constraining Love," moving immediately into one of the most remarkable testimonies of Christian discipleship I have ever heard. Dr. Taylor said:

"I want to tell you of a Christian layman who lived on an island off the coast of Brazil—a farmer who read the Bible which a carpenter had brought along with him as he came to repair the farmer's barn—and reading that Bible, he was convicted of sin. He confessed his sins, asked forgiveness and was saved. But he had never heard a sermon, and so he came to our senior missionary on the mainland just across the sound from his island, asking that we send a preacher to them. That man had walked all day to get to our headquarters. He walked all night to get back home, and when we arrived on the island on the following day afternoon for the promised service, he had assembled a large company of people, working all that day at the job. I said to a friend, 'Isn't this a remarkable thing this man has done?' The man thought a moment, and answered, 'Not when you have his slogan, namely, Not lazy in the Gospel!'"

And then Dr. Taylor made his appeal to Christians of our day and generation and of our favored nation to be diligent in the work of the Master in the hurrying days that remain to us. Said he: "I see gray hairs all about in this audience, and I see gray hairs every time I look in a mirror. Most of us here tonight have but a few years at best in which to serve. The night cometh. Let us then, in the words of the noble layman of the island, resolve that we will not be lazy in the Gospel. If I might be permitted to write the epitaph for my tomb, and it could be truthfully said, I would choose these words, 'He was not lazy in the Gospel.' With millions of people going daily on in unbelief, and with alarming conditions obtaining throughout the world because of Satan's subtle schemes, let us highly resolve that we will give ourselves anew to the blessed work of the Saviour in telling men everywhere of God's redeeming love."

Education Group Meets Today

Nationally Famous Educators To Address 3-Day Conclave; Rivers, Mayor Speak Tonight.

Thousands of Georgia school teachers will pour into Atlanta today to discuss their problems at the annual convention of the Georgia Education Association, which will continue through Saturday.

School superintendents and board members gathered yesterday in a pre-convention meeting, and the association will hold its first full session at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the city auditorium.

The convention takes on added significance because of the present financial plight of the schools. Superintendents and board members took up financial problems yesterday but further sessions on this aspect of the school program are expected today and throughout the convention.

Departmental meetings, administrative problems and general teaching philosophy also will command the attention of the teachers.

Leaders from throughout the country will be here for addresses. They will include Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, representing the National Association of Manufacturers; Dr. Ben Graham, superintendent of public instruction in Pittsburgh; Dr. Joseph S. Kornfeld, author and former minister to Persia; Dr. D. Obersteiner, professor of physical education at Ohio State University, and Dr. W. R. McConnell, of the department of education, Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

Governor Rivers, Dr. Graham and Mayor Hartsfield are scheduled on the program at 8 o'clock tonight. W. J. Andrews, Stephens county superintendent, will preside. A joint banquet of superintendents and teachers will precede the meeting tonight.

NEW SECRET WARPLANE CATCHES FIRE IN AIR

DAYTON, Ohio, March 22.—(AP) A new type fighting plane, set for delivery to the army and valued at $275,000 by its owners, took fire in mid-air today and crashed near Wright field.

Frank Sinclair, civilian test pilot for the Seversky Aircraft Company, suffered burns and bruises but parachuted to safety. The plane was destroyed.

Highly valued by the Seversky company because of its experimental design, the single-seat ship was one of several that builders have submitted to the air corps for possible purchase. It had not been bought.

developing the best in the youth they serve.

As Principal Collins was stating the case of the common school teacher, F. T. Wills, superintendent of the Cobb county schools, was in Atlanta discussing the school problems with superintendents from Georgia's other counties.

Collins was backed by Homer Bell, superintendent of Smyrna schools, also of the Cobb system, who asserted "the situation is really serious for scores of teachers throughout the state."

Bell said his school probably will remain open, but that it will be decided at a mass meeting to be held Saturday afternoon in Smyrna. If the schools operate the full nine months, patrons must pay tuition in order that teachers can be paid, he explained.

Powder Springs and McEachern High schools also will close along with the one at Marietta and all seven-month schools of the county were expected to be forced to follow suit, according to reports.

The state now owes Cobb county $45,000 under pledged allocations to the various school systems, but none of the back pay can be expected at an early date, it was said.

S. M. Rosser, principal of the Elizabeth school, Cobb county, said he had not received any money for three months teaching and pointed out that Mrs. Rosser, who also is a teacher in the same plighted with $240 coming to her.

Collins was graduated from the University of Georgia and took post graduate work at Emory University.

DeKalb county, however, may be found to continue to operate schools, but Miss Helene Broadman, seventh grade teacher at Druid Hills school, was "concerned about what is going to happen to hundreds of thousands of teachers who have obligations and commitments they can not meet."

"We in DeKalb county can get along somehow, but what about the teacher in more modest systems, where the salaries are small anyway and where they can not save anything?" she asked.

"The teachers who are actually going to suffer. They can not pay their board bills. They are under a mental strain when their minds should be clear to teach. Even if landlords are willing to carry them, they are embarrassed. Their credit is gone. They can not give their best to their work. The landlord needs his money or he would not be taking boarders, and he is entitled to it."

R. Yow, who was graduated from Presbyterian College two years ago, teaches mathematics and is acting coach at the Conyers Public school, a part of the Rockdale school system.

Yow is not "overly concerned about my money, although I sure could use it, but I am apprehensive for thousands who actually must have their money to live on and meet their obligations."

"Something should be done to stop this practice of mistreating school teachers in this state," he averred. "The time has come for some long-range planning."

Assistant superintendent; N. P. Malcom of Seminole county; J. H. McGibbony, of Carroll county; J. F. Lambert, of Fort Valley, and J. L. Smith, of Clayton county.

Appointed to the nominating committee were F. T. Wills, of Marietta; A. J. Jarrell of Cusseta; O. A. Bacon, of Hartselle; and P. Z. Geer, of Colquitt.

PROGRAM TO RESUME SOON, MRS. RIVERS SAYS

Mrs. Rivers, wife of Georgia's governor, predicted in a radio interview yesterday the state's expanded educational program would be resumed in the near future despite opposition from "those who put personal selfishness above the importance of their fellow men."

Asked her opinion on teaching as a profession, Mrs. Rivers replied: "I think teaching affords one of the greatest opportunities for a man or woman to do good and to have a definite part in the progress of this world, or a nation, a state and a county. The teacher is of primary importance in the moulding of citizens."

Mrs. Rivers was asked if she had a message for the teachers of Georgia.

"To every teacher in Georgia," she said, "there just this to say. More of our people are beginning to realize the importance of your work today than ever before. They are beginning to see the need for an expanded education program and I believe the day is not far distant when teachers will be placed ahead of other workers and instead of behind, and their compensation and welfare will become among the first obligations of government to be met, instead of near the last."

Mrs. Rivers was engaged as a teacher for 13 years, resigning from the school system in 1921, to move to the Governor's mansion after her husband's election to the governorship.

TEACHERS ASSAIL FREE TEXTBOOKS

Adequate classroom instruction and economic security should come before free schoolbooks and other school expenses, Habersham county teachers declared in resolutions adopted yesterday at a special meeting. "We think adequate classroom instruction and economic security for the teachers should be provided for first, and any excess funds be applied to free school books and other expenses which are good in themselves but secondary in importance," the resolutions declared.

They added, "We believe that the state and legislature should be bound legally and morally to give the teachers of the state reasonable security in their position. By reasonable security we mean being paid on a contract basis, raise in salary schedule and some system of teacher retirement."

STOP HITLER ACTION SPEEDIED IN EUROPE

tees such as those in her defensive alliance with France.

The Poles have complained frankly that Britain is in no position to protect her against Hitler unless British conscription is ordered to provide for an expeditionary force at the moment a conflict breaks out.

Britain believes, however, that Poland may be brought into the "stop Hitler" bloc by means of general British financial aid to Warsaw, enabling expansion of Polish armaments. Similar financial aid is in prospect for Rumania.

Europe's tense developments of the past 24 hours were highlighted by:

1.—France appeared to be attempting a three-point compromise with Premier Benito Mussolini on his "natural aspiration" demands in the Mediterranean after receiving a tip that Il Duce is amenable to settle the dispute without going to war.

2.—Hitler, before sailing for Memel, boarded his battleship Deutschland to annex formally the Baltic territory to his expanding Reich, was said to have laid down a program for striking back at the "stop Hitler" drive in a personal message to Mussolini.

3.—Sir Stanley, president of the British Board of Trade, announced that Britain rejected all prospects of achieving a trade agreement with Hitler as result of "the political developments of the past few days."

Reprisals to U. S.

4.—Nazi Economic Minister Walther Funk, in a Bavarian speech, intimated that Germany was preparing reprisals against the United States 25 per cent penalty tariff on German imports and the economic reprisals of other nations.

5.—The German and Lithuanian foreign ministers signed a treaty, in Berlin, sealing Lithuania's surrender of Memelland, and providing for (1) Lithuania's neutrality and security against any Nazi invasion, (2) the tri-power military alliance at Memel and (3) Lithuania's promise never to support any third power attacking Germany.

6.—Anti-German feeling rose in Rumania as a German trade mission struggled to bring King Carol's government into agreement on German demands for economic rights giving the Reich a large share of Rumania's oil and agricultural output. Anti-German feeling also increased in Poland where anti-anti-raid maneuvers start today to protect the population to war conditions.

Diplomats discussing the prospect of joint Anglo-French-Soviet general staff consultations believed they might have an enormous deterrent effect on the dictators if put in operation immediately.

Germany and Italy and their central European ally, Hungary, probably could throw about 9,000,000 troops into action immediately after the outbreak of a war, it was estimated.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet, who is in London for the four-day state visit of French President Albert Lebrun, were believed to have discussed the tri-power military staff proposal in a conference late today at the house of commons.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler's lightning seizure of the Memel territory, after serving an ultimatum on Lithuania which carried the threat of invasion, and the "stop Hitler" movement on an urgent basis.

In Rome, meanwhile, the Fascist press defiantly echoed a statement that the "Halt Hitler" movement is a "forerunner of war" and headlines announced that Italy and Germany will stand together in accepting any challenge.

CZECHS REASSURED THEY'LL "NOT PERISH"

PARIS, March 22.—(UP)—The foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies tonight approved a French pledge to the people of Czechoslovakia assuring them that they will "not perish" and that Germany's "injustice and violence will last but a short while."

The full meaning of the pledge was not explained. It was understood that the statement would be submitted soon to parliament for approval.

The foreign affairs committee approved the statement after hearing a confidential report on the international situation from its chairman, Jean Mistler.

NAZI "SHOCK FORCES" INVADE LITTLE MEMEL

MEMEL, March 22.—(UP)—Motorized companies of German "shock forces" tonight rolled into Memel from east Prussia and occupied it in the name of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, who is riding eastward through the Baltic aboard his battleship Deutschland for a triumphal first time in his series of appearances after smashing Europe's frontiers. Hitler is riding to Memel in a sea parade, symbolic of Germany's naval strength.

HITLER IS HISSED IN RUMANIAN MOVIE

BUCHAREST, March 22.—(AP)—The Rumanian government apologized to German authorities today for the behavior of a movie audience of diplomats and high officials who hissed a newsreel of Adolf Hitler last night.

Makes First 'B' After 13 Years of School

Emory Student Makes His First 'B' In 13 Years of Georgia Schooling

For the first time since he began grammar school 13 years ago in Leslie, Ga., James Wilson, of Tifton, now a junior at Emory University, has made a grade less than "A" in his studies.

With the close of the winter quarter last week, Wilson received a "B," indicative merely of "superior" work, in a journalism course, "Law of the Press." The grade seems rather ironical to him because when he graduates with an A. B. degree next year, he plans to enter the Harvard Law school.

When he learned of the score which broke a 13-year record, Wilson shrugged his shoulders and laughed. "Variety is the spice of life," he said. "And to tell you the truth, I think I did make a couple of 'B's' in deportment while in grade school."

The son of a prominent south Georgia Methodist minister, Rev. J. H. Wilson, the 19-year-old Emory student has lived in seven different towns. He attended two different elementary schools and three high schools, graduating in 1936 from Cordele High school as top honor man in his class.

Born in Oliver, Ga., he lived there two years. He started school at Leslie, then moved to Macon and skipped the third grade. He entered Lanier High school at Macon in 1932, but after three months transferred to Sandersville High, finally taking his last two years at Cordele.

JAMES W. BORING, 91, 'DIXIE' DAVIS GETS LIGHT SENTENCE

Funeral Services Tomorrow Morning for Pioneer North Georgian.

James W. Boring, pioneer north Georgian, and the father of the Rev. W. H. Boring, pastor of the Wesley Memorial Methodist church, died last night at his home, 718 Sycamore street, Decatur. He was 91 years old.

Mr. Boring was born on a farm in the DeKalb county community of Panthersville, and had spent his entire life in this section.

A seven-month siege of typhoid fever, usually fatal in those days, prevented his enlistment in the Confederate army during the War Between the States. His memories included the march of Sherman's soldiers past his home, and the burning of Atlanta.

Approximately 60 years ago he moved to Atlanta, and was a partner in the retail grocery firm of Boring & Brown for several years. Later, he became connected with the old Richmond & Danville railroad, and after that line was absorbed in the Southern Railway system, he was made cashier of the company's Atlanta office. He retired about 30 years ago.

Surviving in addition to his son are two daughters, Mrs. Fred Astin, Fitzgerald, and Mrs. Henry Heard, Atlanta.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in Trinity chapel, Decatur, with the Rev. R. A. Edmondson and the Rev. W. H. LaPrade officiating. Burial will be in the family plot in Wesley Chapel cemetery.

Another Witness Against Jimmy Hines Given Suspended Term.

NEW YORK, March 22.—(UP) At the urgent request of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, sleek young lawyer who took over the $200,000,000 Harlem lottery racket after the murder of Dutch Schultz, today won a light sentence from Justice Ferdinand Pecora.

Davis, who, with other members of the Schultz mob, aided Dewey in convicting James J. Hines, Tammany district leader, of protecting the Schultz racket, was sentenced to a year in prison, but from this was deducted the 170 days he already has spent there. From the remaining six months it is possible that two will be subtracted for good behavior.

Harry (The Horse) Schoenhaus, bookkeeper for the Schultz gang, won a suspended sentence, also at Dewey's request. With Davis he had pleaded guilty to lottery participation and was a principal witness against Hines. A third member of the gang, George Weinberg, business manager for the mob, was an important witness in Hines' first trial, which ended in a mistrial, but committed suicide before the second.

Jimmy Hines, brawny blacksmith who became Tammany's most powerful district boss, is to be sentenced tomorrow by Judge Charles C. Nott Jr.

SENATE REVERSES ON REFORM BILL

Administration Swings Enough Support Overnight To Snatch Victory.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP) Administration forces plucked victory from defeat today when the senate passed, 63 to 23, a government reorganization bill minus an amendment which would have given legislators more control over the President's reorganization orders. (Both George and Russell, of Georgia, voted for the bill.)

The amendment had been attached to the bill only yesterday, but today the senate reversed itself and struck it out by a two-vote margin.

The bill, authorizing the President to consolidate or abolish many agencies of the government, had previously been approved by the house. It now goes to conference for discussion of amendments added by the senate.

Opposition centered upon a section providing that reorganization orders to be issued by President Roosevelt under the act should become effective in 60 days unless specifically rejected by both branches of congress.

Republicans and some Democrats argued that this retained too little control for congress. Finally, this faction supported an amendment by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, providing that to become effective reorganization orders must have the specific approval of both branches.

The amendment was adopted yesterday by what was actually a one-vote margin.

Overnight, administration forces persuaded Senator Chavez, Democrat, New Mexico, to change his position on the Wheeler amendment. In addition, Senator Truman, Democrat, Missouri, an opponent of the Wheeler proposal who was absent yesterday, returned to Washington today. Consequently reconsideration won by 46 to 44, and then, by the same vote, the Wheeler amendment was taken out of the bill.

The measure, as approved, was but a shadowy reminder of the reorganization bill which became one of the foremost issues of last session.

WOULD HAVE REFUSED ANYHOW, D. A. R. SAYS

BOSTON, March 22.—(UP)—Marian Anderson, negro contralto, would have been denied use of Constitution Hall in Washington even if it had been available, the Daughters of the American Revolution officially disclosed today.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, president general, in a message read at the forty-fifth annual state convention of the Massachusetts D. A. R. stated that the hall is leased in accordance with rules applying to most theaters, hotels and restaurants in the capital which call for segregation of whites and negroes.

Miniature Portraits To Be Given Historical Society on Saturday

By Sally Forth.

WHEN the Atlanta Historical Society meets on Saturday evening at the Biltmore hotel, portrait miniatures of Mrs. F. M. Robinson, the late Mr. Robinson, and the late Mrs. J. L. Spalding will be presented to the organization. The miniatures of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson were made in Germany during the past few months especially for the society. Mrs. Spalding's portrait is the work of Lieber Freidenthal, of Asheville, and this also was done especially for the society's pictorial collection.

Mrs. Robinson is the president of the Atlanta Child's Home, which she founded in 1907 and to which she has consistently devoted her time, her talents, and her money since that date. The home was first located on Angier avenue and through the munificence of Mrs. Robinson and her husband, it was later established on a 40-acre tract on Hightower road. The home has sheltered some 4,500 mothers and children and its record of service provides a splendid chapter in Atlanta history. Sally recalls that Mrs. Robinson was designated an honor guest of the Atlanta Historical Society in 1938, but illness prevented her acceptance of the courtesy.

Mrs. Spalding, wife of the late beloved president of the society, was a charming and gracious member of Atlanta's social set and actively interested in various cultural activities of the city for nearly 50 years. She was a devoted member of the Sacred Heart church and at one time she served as president of the Ladies' Altar Society, and her contributions of time and sympathy and money to unfortunates of the locality endeared her to hosts of friends.

Frank Mason Robinson was born in Maine, but located in Atlanta in 1886 and became a leader in the city's business life. Enthusiastic in his regard for the city, he contributed to the advancement of many movements for the betterment of the people.

PEGGY FOUNTAIN, the attractive blond guest of Georgia Oliver, is finding the south both thrilling and disappointing. The belle, who attends Mount Vernon Seminary with her hostess in Washington, D. C., resides in New York city, and her visit here marks the first time she has crossed the Mason-Dixon line. Peggy has seen red clay, pickaninies and southern gentlemen galore since her arrival on Saturday and has tasted Georgia peaches and grits. Her approval of most southern customs is wholehearted, but when asked what she thought of grits, her face fell. In pronounced Yankee tones she informed listeners that she was definitely disappointed in them, and that she didn't understand why that particular southern dish was so glorified by writers.

The eastern visitor tasted quail on toast for the first time, and found it delicious. As for "southern hospitality," the sparkle in Peggy's eyes when quizzed on this subject is more eloquent than words.

ATLANTA friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blake hear that they are enjoying an unhurried tour of the world. They left the United States several months ago from the west coast and are making their way eastward around the globe. Mrs. Blake, you know, is the former Maria Brown, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown, of this city, and with Mr. Blake she now calls San Francisco "home."

This week Tommy and Maria are sojourning in the Holy Land and, according to present plans, they will spend Holy Week and Easter Sunday in Rome, Italy, where the religious celebration during that time is noted for its impressive and magnificent beauty.

Miss Cotten Feted At Initial Parties

Miss Betty Cotten, whose marriage to J. Lehmman Brantley will be solemnized on Easter Sunday at the Westminster Presbyterian church, is being honored at a number of prenuptial social affairs.

Rev. Ferguson Wood will officiate at the ceremony and Miss Margie Cotten, sister of the bride-elect, will be maid of honor and only attendant.

Arthur Brantley, brother of the groom-elect, will be best man.

Misses Dorothy Reese and Dorothy Brantley were hostesses recently at the home of Miss Reese on Adair avenue complimenting the bride-elect.

Saturday evening Mrs. Francis E. Price will entertain at a card party for Miss Cotten at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue.

On April 1, Miss Juliette Semmes will entertain at a tea for the bride-elect and Mrs. Oliver Zoll will be hostess at an evening shower at her home on Briarcliff road on April 3.

Miss Martha McCrory was hostess at a kitchen shower recently, honoring Miss Cotten, at her home on Pelham road. The hostess was assisted by Mesdames J. M. Shropshire and Anne Hoffmann.

Guests were Misses Margaret Brantley, Dorothy Reese, Eleanor Van Fleet, Rosemary Zoll, Ruby Hollingsworth, Margie Cotten, Harriet Oxford, Mary Past, Joan Hughes, Carolyn Russell, Edna McAlone, Mesdames Chick Little, Ferguson Wood and R. M. McFarland Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Cotten, parents of the bride-elect, have planned an open house on April 2. No cards have been issued, the affair to be an informal compliment to their daughter and her fiancé.

On April 8, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cooper will entertain for the affianced pair at a family dinner party at their home on Matheson road in Brookhaven. The bride party and immediate families will be present.

The bride-elect acted as flower girl when Mr. and Mrs. Cooper were married and Mr. Cooper acted as best man in the wedding of the bride-elect's parents.

Spring Gardening
by Fletcher Pearson, Owner

Not one of you will need an introduction to the Marigold family, they have been with us for many years, they are always included even in the smallest garden. Newer and improved varieties are added each year, while we still include those old standbys, African Queen, Lemon and African Orange. We also have Mexican, Australian, French and our own Dixie sunshine. I have seen as many as 25 varieties listed in one catalogue. They are single and double, one called tagetes signata, six inches tall, the Australian giants, 15 feet tall. If some man would take marigolds for a hobby we would all travel far to enjoy the wonderful collection he could make.

Another plant lending itself for a collection is the petunia. This lovely plant is too well known to need any remarks, all gardeners grow some form of it. I do not want to call attention to Nicotiana, affinis white is 18 inches tall and silvestris white is six feet tall. They come into bloom early and continue as long as you keep the seed pods off. Crimson Bedder is a new dwarf rich crimson. The hybrids come in tones of pink and lavender.

Last year at one of our flower shows a dwarf edging plant attracted a great deal of attention because of the profusion of lovely lavender-blue blossoms. Its name is Nierembergia Hippomaniaca or cup-flower. This is a perennial, but seed planted now will bloom in August. It grows readily and has wintered perfectly. Also grow the upright variety called Nierembergia Gracilis.

In planting Nasturtiums you will find that the tall varieties grow in partial shade can be carried through the summer and in the fall will be even more attractive than you thought it was in the spring. The gleam hybrids are the popular varieties now.

Attend The Constitution's Spring Garden school, March 28, 29, 30, at the Atlanta Woman's Club.

Butts-Carter Plans Announced Today

The marriage of Miss Jeannette Butts to McHenry Carter Jr. will take place at the Gordon Street Baptist church on the evening of April 7, at 8:30 o'clock.

Dr. W. H. Faust will perform the ceremony. Mrs. Ruby Vickery will be the soloist, and Miss Marietta Faust will present a program of organ music prior to and during the nuptials.

The bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, John W. Butts Sr. For her attendants Miss Butts has chosen her sisters, Miss LeRoy Butler and Miss Rebecca Butts, as matron and maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Misses Myrtle Spradling, Dorothy Sigman and Mesdames Dorothy Rousey and Mary Slate, sister of the bridegroom-elect.

Mr. Carter has chosen for his best man, J. B. Rousey. Serving as ushers and groomsmen will be Taylor Womack, Lewis Cheatham, T. L. Krawth, W. O. Slate Jr., LeRoy Butler and John Butts Jr., brother of the bride-elect.

Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames C. E. Sutton, Harry Booker, G. T. Armstrong, Maynard Elam, Alex. Anderson, of Washington; Mesdames W. T. Dunaway, Hugh Green, Curry May, Thomas Matthews, Mel Reid and H. D. Beazelle, of Lincolnton. Mrs. Robert Pharr, of Wilmington, kept the bride's book.

During the evening a program of music was given by Mrs. Henry Standard. Miss Frances C. John-

Decatur Belle Weds Mr. Trask

MR. AND MRS. JOHN LAWRENCE TRASK.

Miss Ida Jones Renfro, of Decatur, became the bride of John Lawrence Trask, of Boston, Mass., and St. Louis, Mo., at a ceremony solemnized last evening at 8:30 o'clock at the Church of Our Saviour. Canon Charles Schilling read the service in the presence of relatives and friends.

Palms were grouped in artistic arrangement with branched candelabra holding white tapers around the altar, with baskets of Easter lilies on either side. Satin bouquets marked the pews reserved for the families and reception guests.

Mrs. E. C. Kelly Jr., presented a program of nuptial music and Miss Myra Barber sang "Oh, Perfect Love." Ushers were John Renfro Jr., brother of the bride, and John J. Jones, of Waynesboro.

Mrs. Henry Ellis, of Statesboro, was matron of honor and Miss Mary Gresham served as maid of honor. They wore gowns fashioned alike of chartruse net posed over matching taffeta. The tight bodices featured sweetheart necklines, high puffed sleeves and long, full skirts. Their headresses were made of green net with tiny ruffles and were worn tied under the chin with bows of matching ribbon. They carried bouquets of coral-colored roses.

Little Misses Carolyn Heery and Betty Lee served as junior maids. Their frocks, made like those of the matron and maid, were of coral-colored net and they carried nosegays of pastel-shaded spring blossoms and their headresses were of coral net.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, John Griffin Renfro Sr., and they were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, William P. Bereyle, of Baltimore, Md.

Ivory satin was used to fashion the bride's gown, which was made along princess lines. The sweetheart neckline was trimmed with tulle and small satin buttons extended down the back below the waistline and finished the long sleeves ending in points over the hands. The skirt flared in fullness below the knees and formed a fan-shaped train in the back. She wore a necklace with pendant of diamonds and pearls, a gift to her mother on her wedding day.

The ivory illusion tulle veil was made in tiers and covered the entire train of the gown and was fitted to her hair with a halo and clusters of orange blossoms. Her flowers were valley lilies showered with bride's roses.

Mrs. Renfro, mother of the bride, wore a gown of ashes of roses, fashioned with a jacket, and her shoulder spray was of Parma violets and valley lilies.

Mrs. John William Trask, of Boston, mother of the groom, wore a gown of royal blue lace, offset with a bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Arthur Gresham, aunt of the bride, wore blue lace. Her shoulder bouquet was of yellow roses and valley lilies.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gresham entertained at an informal reception at their home in Decatur.

Receiving with the hosts were the bride and groom, and parents of the bride and groom. The dining table, overlaid with a cloth of Italian lace and embroidery, was centered with a heart-shaped wedding cake, embossed in white and green and topped with a miniature bride and groom. Surrounding the cake were valley lilies, snowdrops and a fringe of madeline fern. Tall silver candelabra held burning white tapers on either side.

Mrs. S. R. Christie Jr. presided at the coffee table and Mrs. Edward Ford kept the bride's book. Other assisting were Mrs. John J. Jones and Miss Jane Gresham, of Waynesboro; Mrs. Jack Thurmond and Miss Harriet Campbell.

In the evening Mr. Trask and his bride left for a trip to New Orleans, after which they will reside in St. Louis.

For traveling Mrs. Trask chose a suit of navy sheer crepe. Her navy blouse was embroidered in shades of cyclamen. Her hat and accessories matched her costume, and she wore a shoulder cluster of roses and valley lilies.

State Federation President Stresses 'Citizenship' in Speech in LaGrange

By BESSIE S. STAFFORD,
Editor of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

LAGRANGE, Ga., March 22.—

In her forceful address made here Wednesday evening, Mrs. Albert M. Hill, of Greenville, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, said there is only one way for clubwomen to live victoriously, and that is to be good citizens of Georgia. Her subject was "Victorious Living," and she spoke at the opening session of the 44th convention held in the LaGrange College auditorium.

She quoted the Apostle Paul as proudly boasting: "I am a citizen of Rome, a citizen by birth and inheritance of the greatest empire of this day." There was nothing unique in Paul's attitude then or now, declared Mrs. Hill. "Two centuries later we find ourselves saying that we are American citizens, fully conscious to lay claim to the proudest heritage on earth, to be by birth a citizen of the world's greatest democracy. First of all we expect security. Security from invading foes, protection from evil forces that may arise within our homeland, safeguarding of health by scientifically progressive and progressive measures, a minimum of economic security, at least the security that comes through establishment of peace."

Priceless Heritages. She cited as priceless heritages freedom of thought, speech, and freedom of the press and radio. "So long have we enjoyed these rights, that life without them is inconceivable to us. We demand the right of freeborn members of a democracy. We must have the proper pride in God, home and native land that shone in Paul's reply to the Roman captain when he said he was a citizen of no mean city. But pride is of little value if it has not strength to prove itself, therefore courage is essential. Train our youth to be self-reliant, independent, in thought and capable of reaching his own conclusions, for the rubber stamp can have no part in building tomorrow," said the speaker.

She stressed gratitude to country as another fundamental of good citizenship, because without gratitude there can be no patriotism. Mrs. Hill stated, "We must appreciate the good things in our national life that come to us practically without effort. To be a good citizen our education must include knowledge of the world of things, the world of people, and the world of ideas, past and present. The American home is the first and best teacher because in the home lies the point of attack," said Mrs. Hill. "How much wiser adults would be if we first taught our children to love the beauties of nature, to love the human soul, to love the home town and its people and to adore our lovely Georgia. Plant appreciation in their souls that makes for vision and appreciation of possibilities and a burning desire to convert possibilities into shining realities."

Mrs. Hill called upon clubwomen to clear their good citizenship house and determine that no carelessness enter therein, but that alertness and intelligence be the order of the day. She told them to draft tried and true citizens for office in county, town, city and state. "Demand that schools, institutions and penal systems be established on sane and dignified bases and cease to be political footballs; clean the windows of this house, make them bright and shining; pull down every drape of political propaganda that obscures for us and our children a clear vision of the glorious land. When these things are done, citizens of Georgia, we can say that is victorious living," concluded Mrs. Hill.

Mrs. Albert Hill and Mrs. John W. Jenkins preside over the first business session to be held Thursday morning at LaGrange Woman's College. The department of education will be directed by the state chairman, Mrs. J. C. Rogers, of Dahlgren, who will present the speaker, Dr. Marion Pittman, president of South Georgia Teachers' College. Important among the speakers is Miss Laura Berrien, of Washington, D. C., national president of Women Lawyers' Association, who speaks on "National Legislation," and will be presented by Mrs. Marvin Medlock, of Atlanta, State Federation chairman. Public welfare program is under the direction of the state chairman, Mrs. Frank Dennis, of Eatonton, who introduces her division chairmen to present a skit entitled "We, the People." Mrs. George Burrus, of Columbus, reports on the completion of courses, of which she is chairman. Mrs. E. I. Dixon, of Thomasville, citizenship chairman, directs the preliminary exercises of the Thursday evening session. Junior Club Women's program will be under the direction of Mrs. H. J. Whitehead, of Comer, and Mrs. F. Freyer, of Manchester, and an original skit by Mrs. Freyer features the program.

Presentation of Georgia University Glee Club under the direction of Hugh Hodgson, of the department of fine arts at the university, is planned by Mrs. Alva Maxwell, of Atlanta, federation fine arts chairman, and Miss Minna Hecker, of Atlanta, is the soloist.

Tallahassee School Emphasized. Emphasis of the Tallahassee School hour at the Friday morning session of this convention will be paid upon reports of the standing up-to-date Class A Clubs of Georgia Federation under the dollar-a-year plan, under which clubs function this year according to suggestion of trustees of Tallahassee School; approval of the state executive board members and recommendation of the state president, Mrs. Albert M. Hill, of Greenville.

Mrs. John K. Otley, of Atlanta, president of the board of trustees presides over the Tallahassee hour. Spotlighting Friday's program will be a report on student aid foundation made by the chairman, Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens; report on Ella White memorial foundation made by Mrs. Z. L. Patrick, the chairman, and Mrs. Price Smith, of Atlanta, as chairman of college gift scholarships makes her report at this session.

The luncheon given by LaGrange Clubwomen honors Tallahassee School, and the occasion also emphasizes the dollar-a-year plan for Tallahassee, LaGrange Women's Club being one of the most loyal followers of this splendid plan.

Scientifically Planned Reducing Menus Prevent Deficiencies

Don't Reduce Health While Losing Pounds

By Ida Jean Kain.

Dieting can be a very risky business. Unless you follow scientifically planned menus you are in danger of developing a vitamin and mineral deficiency, and no diet should ever, for this reason, be cut below 1,000 calories. It takes that many calories to include the essential food elements.

You can better appreciate the necessity for these elements in the diet when you understand what happens without them. As long as your diet is adequate in every respect except in calories, there is no danger to your health for you have a store of calories in the form of fat upon which to draw.

There is no such reserve store of minerals, vitamins or protein. Just suppose that your diet is deficient in calcium—as it would be if you failed to include eggs, milk or cheese in the reducing menu. If you do not provide the calcium needed, your body will not cooperate with you. For one thing, health of your teeth is affected by a low calcium diet.

Sufficient iron is also essential even though you are reducing. A deficiency of this mineral will lower the body's vigor and will cause you to feel tired most of the time. At best our diet is apt to be low in iron and the supply is further diminished in an unscientific reducing diet—or even in the diet of the overweight who carelessly consumes large quantities of sugars and starches and fails to eat sufficient amounts of the green leafy vegetables and protein. Your richest sources of iron are eggs, vegetables and meats.

Protein is—as I have repeatedly told you, the very backbone of a reducing diet. You must have it—complete protein foods—lean meat, eggs, milk and cheese. Although varying amounts of protein are supplied in other foods, such as breads, cereals and certain vegetables, the complete proteins must be included in the diet. This food element is utilized for the repair work of the body. All body tissues undergo constant wear and tear and as they are worn out they must be repaired. That is where protein comes in. Unless adequate protein is supplied by the diet, it is formed through the breaking down of muscular tissue.

The protective vitamins are necessary to high resistance and optimum health and they cannot be left out of the daily menus. The foods that supply them are fresh fruits, fruit juices, vegetables, milk, butter, whole grains.

Smart Street Frock

By Barbara Bell

If you want an unusually good-looking dress for general, all-around wear, and yet with enough softness to make it appropriate for informal afternoons, then this design (1721-B) will exactly fill the bill. It has classic, well-bred simplicity, and graceful, slenderizing lines. The slim-hipped skirt, that ripples to circular fullness at the hem, is topped by a gathered bodice, with a plain V-neckline and pretty sleeves. It fits beautifully over the bust. A row of buttons (and buttons are very smart right now) is the sole trimming. That fact gives you plenty of chance to wear costume jewelry and flowers with the dress.

A basic style like this looks well in so many different materials. Flat crepe, silk print, trim wool and triple sheers are suggested for right now.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1721-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4-5 yards of 36-inch material. One yard of elastic trim neck. Send for Barbara Bell's spring pattern book! Make your own smart new frocks for street, daytime and afternoon, with these simple, carefully planned designs! It's chic, it's easy, it's economical, to sew your own pattern in a guided step-by-step sew chart to guide beginners.

Price of pattern, 15c. Price of pattern book, 15c. Do not send stamps. Mail orders to Barbara Bell Pattern Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

By now you probably realize that your calorie cut must be only in the starches, sugars and fats. Fat, by the way, is the food you need least and it is also the highest in calories. A considerable calorie cut can be made in this element.

By following menus that supply all the protective elements, your weight reduction will not affect your health—except to the improvement of it!

There's Dignity In Louis XVI Furniture

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

It was for Marie Antoinette of "Let Them Eat Cake" fame that the cabinet makers created the furniture of the Louis XVI period. And it expresses her charming delicacy of taste, her naive sophistication, but it reflects more than that—the classic revival, stimulated by the unearthing of Pompeii and Herculaneum, touched the Louis XVI furniture with a certain dignity. Perhaps this was the natural reaction to the excessive curves of the Louis XV period.

Straight Legs. In any case, you can usually distinguish between these two types of furniture by remembering that Louis XV pieces typically have the cabriole (or curved) legs, while Louis XVI pieces have straight legs. This straight leg is nearly always reeded or grooved but in rather austere detail. The swirls and abandoned curves of Louis XV gave way in Louis XVI furniture to more classic ornament and to plainer panels.

Not that Marie Antoinette's decorations lost their femininity—they still were replete with bow knots and garlands and it was she who encouraged such frequent use of garden tools, shepherd crooks, garden hats, and so on in the designs of rugs and fabrics. But essentially the furniture of the period had more restraint than preceding styles and possibly for that reason it is more easily adaptable to the contemporary scene than French furniture of other times.

Know Secrets Of Sparkling Conversation

Poor tongue-tied Sue! How she wishes she could say something really fascinating to Jack. Maybe then he wouldn't look so longingly at Babs and the others across the aisle.

Used to be out of it, too, till she discovered that just as a girl must learn to dance or play tennis, she must teach herself the art of conversation.

How? By finding out what warm, vital conversation is, by knowing the rules that bring friends, good times—rules like these:

BE RESPONSIVE. When a boy says, "How did you like the movie last night?"—your "all right" lets the talk fall with a thud. But you keep it dancing airily when you answer, "It was fun. I suppose I love westerns, don't you?"

BE INTERESTING. Before you leave for a date or party, think up subjects for talk—books you've read, radio programs you've heard. And if you learn to look at things with fresh eyes, you can make even a bus ride seem exciting. Say, "Bumping along like this reminds me of those amazing travelers, the 'Chicken Wagon Family.' Did you hear the radio play about them?"

Cultivate that sparkling conversation that brings friends. Our 40-page booklet, IMPROVING YOUR CONVERSATION, tells faults to avoid, gives pointers on developing a friend-winning voice, a colorful vocabulary. Examples of small talk, sample conversations.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, IMPROVING YOUR CONVERSATION, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Beautiful Maureen O'Sullivan, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, steps out in a double duty evening ensemble. The soft chiffon, with decollete top and voluminous skirt, is worn for dinner, with a tied-at-the-waist jacket of panne velvet, embroidered in crystal beads. A ring corsage of pastel sweet peas lends that last feminine touch.

Jackie Coogan's Estate Consists Mostly of Non-Rental Real Estate

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, March 22.—Jackie Coogan will be worse off than ever when he finally gets his half of the $300,000—all that is left of the four millions he earned as a child star. He receives no cash—merely $150,000 of property, most of it in non-rented real estate, on which Jackie will have to pay taxes!

Alice Faye is happy because Tony Martin is receiving film offers as a result of his successful personal appearance tour. She is now in Palm Springs, getting herself a beautiful tan to look beautiful when Tony returns.

Cary Grant has installed a system of lights at the beach house he shares with Randolph Scott. A red light—a studio sound stage—appears outside his door when he is busy within and does not want to be disturbed. Ditto for Randy.

Howard Hughes, who is supposed to be planning a return to movie-making, has sworn all his associates to secrecy. Howard has never forgotten the derision he received from Hollywood on his first entry into film production, with "Hell's Angels." Even though Hughes did the laughing when the picture netted him a couple of millions.

Gary Cooper would give half of the $10,000 a week he receives from Sam Goldwyn, if he could get out of his contract and free-lance. By an unfortunate coincidence, both the pictures Gary made for Sam—"Adventures of Marco Polo" and "The Cowboy and the Lady"—fell short of Goldwyn's usual high standard. I think all front-ranking stars should free-lance. Only then could they choose pictures that will make them—and their fans—happy.

After the sneak preview of "Wuthering Heights," it was discovered that Merle Oberon's part had been lost somewhere in the shuffle. The picture is now being recut to make Merle's role stand out. Which is kind of sad for a few of the other players, who will lose some of their best scenes in the cutting room floor. . . . Douglas Fairbanks Jr. has set a new Hollywood fashion—he wears dark glasses when rehearsing for the camera. Maybe he is hiding from columnists.

Which reminds me, Marlene Dietrich is delaying her French picture as long as possible. She is determined to make a Hollywood movie first. But, so far, the offers have not materialized into a contract.

Sonja Henie's mother has put her foot down. She does not like her daughter to be involved in synthetic love affairs. She says it is silly and undignified. It was she who insisted that Sonja's brother act as her escort. Lieke does not object, although he would rather get a job acting or in the technical side of the studio.

Claudette Colbert's husband, Dr. Pressman, is experimenting with an absolute cure for those afflicted with deafness. Claudette's threatened flu proved a false alarm and she insists she is in better health now than in the past two years. Her headaches have disappeared entirely. And her trouble is mending. Which is probably why her co-workers find her happier and easier to work with.

Charles Boyer, with whom Deanna Durbin falls in love in her next picture, has not yet met the lady, but is looking forward to the assignment. "It will be like working with my daughter—if I had one," says Charles. . . . And, by the way, the $129,675 listed by Universal as Deanna's income for 1938 is only half of the adolescent's earnings. She makes at least an equal sum via indorsements and radio.

Lyrone Power has bought one of those super-cameras—but here is the surprise—he purchased it on the installment plan. And he earns at least $4,000 a week! . . . Carole Lombard has hired 24 gardeners to complete a rush job on Clark Gable's Encino estate. Carole's mother, Mrs. Peters, has put on record her desire for a church wedding, or a ceremony in a private house performed by a preacher. Well, we shall all know soon what Clark and Carole intend doing.

Says a certain heartbroken (?) but philosophical movie actress, "It is better to have loved and lost, than never to have had any publicity at all!"

Woman's Quiz

Q. How can I dissuade dog and cat visits in my shrubby plantation?

A. Stray dogs and cats can be dissuaded from choice specimens by spraying a solution of nicotine sulphate, one ounce to one gallon of water. Besides being efficacious in repelling their visits for some time, the solution has merit as a contact insecticide. Pepper, red or black, sprinkled around is also said to be good. Dead leaves and branches, killed by dog urine, should be trimmed off. There are several commercial preparations to repel dogs.

Q. Why should the first teeth of children be filled?

A. Early extraction of baby teeth often causes an unbalanced jaw, crowds the permanent teeth and affects the shape of the face.

Q. How may red beets be cooked so that they will retain their bright red color?

A. Add a teaspoonful of vinegar for every pint of water and leave an inch or two of the stem on the beets that are to be boiled.

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, sign your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp and mail to the Woman's Editor of The Constitution, Washington Service Bureau, 1013 13th street, Washington, D. C., for reply. Three of the most interesting answers will be printed here daily. Don't telephone; write as directed.

Not All Is Flu My Day: That Gets You Down

By Dr. William Brady.

Profound prostration out of all proportion to with intensity of the disease is the characteristic on which the diagnosis of influenza is made, in time of epidemic. But a sense of great prostration or weakness such as accompanies mild or in many cases scarcely warrants the inference that the illness is influenza.

The nature and specific cause of the pandemic disease that took millions of lives at the time of the World War was never determined. The disease was most certainly infectious or contagious, and not due to some mysterious external or casual poison or other inscrutable influence. Many years before the war the medical profession had accepted Pfeiffer's bacillus as the cause of influenza, but wartime experience cast doubt on that and led to the present view that influenza is a virus infection, that is, infection with an organism too small to be visible under the standard microscope of the bacteriologist. A disease having features characteristic of influenza is produced in ferrets, mice and other animals by inoculating them with material from cases of human influenza. The blood serum from animals that have recovered from such influenza has some antitoxic value, protecting other animals against developing the disease. So does the blood serum of patients who have recovered from influenza confer a degree of immunity, not complete immunity, but enough to be a help when administered to other patients coming down with influenza. Serum taken from patients during the acute illness, however, has no value against the disease. These observations convince many physicians that influenza, as we see it today, is a virus disease and it seems fairly well accepted now that the disease spreads entirely as a spray infection—the virus being carried from person to person, mainly in the droplets, visible or invisibly fine, of secretion or moisture given off from nose, throat or mouth when the patient sneezes, coughs or talks.

Among fairly polite but sadly uninformed people—that is to say, people who are fairly well educated except about personal health and hygiene—ordinary conversation, in my opinion, is the usual medium of infection. People just will not recognize that a mature spray with a range of from two to five feet is emitted from the mouth of every individual during quiet conversation, even though you do not feel the impact of the droplets.

During the wartime pandemic a thousand prisoners in a German internment camp were kept almost free from influenza, although the disease raged fiercely all around them—each prisoner received 4 grains of quinine daily throughout the period of the epidemic.

Even two grains of quinine a day may give considerable protection against influenza if this treatment is begun early and continued as long as the disease is epidemic.

Many excellent physicians advocate six or eight grains of quinine daily for adults, three or four grains for children, as a prophylactic against influenza when the disease is epidemic. Others believe two grains a day for an adult, one grain a day for a child, sufficient.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Rhubarb. Please tell me the food value of rhubarb and what effect it has on the system. (Mrs. M. C.)

Answer.—Food value insignificant—100 calories in a pound. But it is appetizing, wholesome, a good source of vitamins A, C, B-complex, slightly laxative. Pay no attention to notions about oxalic acid in it—of course, there is oxalic acid in rhubarb, also in spinach, plums, figs, chocolate, cocoa, potatoes, beets, beans, bread crust, etc.—what of it?

Hot Water. Does drinking hot water before and at breakfast harm a person? (G. V. H.)

Answer.—Not if you like it or the effect. Elderly or feeble folk often like to take a glassful or two of hot water before breakfast or with breakfast. Ordinarily, cool or cold water is a better stimulant.

Singleton Lead Can Be Big Gamble

By Harold Sharpsteen.

A singleton lead, with no bid from partner, is one of the biggest gambles in bridge.

Except in rare cases, advanced players usually avoid leading singletons. No other opening lead furnishes the novice with more disappointing results.

ODDS AGAINST LEADER. Success of any singleton lead, obviously, depends upon finding partner with commanding cards in that suit and being able to return the suit. With one partner and two opponents, the natural odds are two to one against the singleton lead resulting advantageously for defender.

If declarer's side holds command of the singleton suit, which is too often the case, the lead establishes a long suit for adversaries with the result declarer wins extra tricks.

Defender, holding two or three worthless trumps of no particular value, leads a singleton, knowing

Mrs. Roosevelt Visits San Francisco Fair

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—We were fortunate yesterday, for, though the sky was somewhat cloudy, we still had spurts of sunshine, and our first view of Treasure Island as we crossed the magnificent new bridge was one of almost dazzling beauty.

This is the second time I have come to San Francisco under the auspices of Mr. Paul Posz, but one this occasion I spoke on Treasure Island, because he is musical director for the fair and therefore arranged my lecture in the auditorium there. We stopped first at the Administration building, where Mr. Cutler joined us and was valiant enough to stay with us during most of the rest of the day. He is proud of his achievement and I do not wonder, for on the whole it gives you the impression of lovely color combinations, with water used in every possible way to enhance the charm of architecture and of the landscape gardening. The trees and flowers have transformed what was a heap of plowed-up earth into a really lovely spot.

We went to visit the State building, where Mrs. George Knox, assistant chairman of the Democratic state committee, greeted us for the Governor, who was obliged to return to Sacramento. Then we went to the City building, where Mayor Rossi welcomed us with a group of ladies.

Most of our time was spent, of course, in the Federal building, which Mr. George Creel kindly showed us. The various activities of the government are very graphically and intelligently placed before your eyes and I should think that everybody would find these exhibitions of vital interest. They show what the government actually does, and so few of us realize the extent of these activities. Mr. Creel has actually set up a city slum and an Arkansas farm shack to show the two extremes of bad housing, in contrast to the efforts made by the government to point the way for improved low housing in both urban and rural areas.

Mrs. Creel, charming as ever, awaited us here and arranged for a peaceful interlude before the lecture. Afterwards we went to a tea given at the Women's Club. This is a charming building, financed and built by the women's committee. I was very happy to meet Mrs. Eve Curie, who has been lecturing here for several days. She is, I hope, coming to Washington for a night before her return to France. I was glad to have this opportunity to tell her how much I admired her work. The book she wrote about her mother is an unforgettable piece of literature.

Mrs. Florence Kahn also greeted me and it was a pleasure to see her again. Miss Anne Morgan and Miss Elsa Maxwell were also at tea and it was pleasant to see familiar faces from New York, as well as my old friends, Captain and Mrs. Edward Macauley and Judge and Mrs. William Denman. Mrs. Denman has put much of herself into the preparation of the Indian exhibit, which fully justifies all the work she and Mr. Rene D'Harcourt have done on it. It is to me one of the outstanding things in the federal exhibition.

Tomorrow I shall have to tell you the most unforgettable impression I have carried away from the fair.

Girl Realizes She's Nagger But Doesn't Know Remedy

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: What can you suggest for a nag who knows she's a nag but hasn't been able to cope with the fault? It's a serious problem because my entire future depends on a cure. The man I love says frankly he won't marry me unless I change my ways and I don't blame him; nobody likes to have a scolding shrew perpetually underfoot. I know there's no magic to work the miracle, but if you will give me some much needed advice as to how to begin, I'll be eternally grateful.

Inspirational Addresses and Reports Feature Meet of Baptist W. M. U.

Yesterday's program for the 57th annual convention of Georgia Baptist W. M. U., meeting for three days at the First Baptist church, was featured by inspirational addresses and reports given by Mrs. Carter Wright, of Roanoke, Ala., representative of B. W. M. U. for the south; Mrs. D. Talmage Ellis, chairman of the Margaret Fund; Dr. Aquila Chambliss, president of the Georgia Baptist convention; Mrs. Mabel Ayorinda, W. M. U. field worker from Nigeria; and Mrs. Frank Burney, state B. W. M. U. president. The golden jubilee program was given at the afternoon session, with Mrs. Peter Kittles, state chairman, presiding, and in the evening the young people's work was presented in pageant form by Miss Miriam Robinson, secretary.

Closing Session.
The closing session this morning will climax the three-day convention and will be featured by the annual election of officers. Mrs. Carter Wright will again lead the devotional, using as her subject another phase of "The Divine Touch: He Touched His Tongue." A memorial service will be conducted by Mrs. Carlton Binns.

Reports at the closing session will be given by Mrs. Marshall Neils, White Cross chairman; Mrs. Joe G. Senn, auditor; and Miss Mary Christian, executive secretary-treasurer. Reports of various committees will be heard. Speaker of the morning will be Mrs. W. J. Neal, president emerita.

In Mrs. Wright's message yesterday on "The Divine Touch: He Touched His Tongue," her audience was made to feel anew the need of the Divine touch upon the individual life. "His touch," she said, "means health, happiness and hope."

Mrs. Ellis, who for five years has been chairman of the Margaret Fund, which is a love fund for the education of missionaries' sons and daughters, chose as her subject "Love Is the Theme." Dr. Chambliss spoke on the true aim of all Christian work, soul winning. "The 24,000,000 lost souls in the southland today is a challenge to every Christian," he said.

Mrs. Ayorinda spoke of the evidence of the love of Christ in Africa. "No one race of people has a monopoly on Jesus—all who will come to Him regardless of color, class or creed," said Mrs. Ayorinda. Mrs. E. E. Steele, mission study chairman, presented her work by demonstration. Nine hundred twenty-eight classes were reported for 1938.

The closing message of the morning by the president, Mrs. Frank Burney, on the theme, "Go Tell," was a strong appeal to Christians to be busy about the supreme task, witnessing, telling the gospel news of salvation to others.

The jubilee program in the afternoon revealed that Georgia led the 19 states of the Southern Baptist Convention in jubilee gifts. The Georgia B. W. M. U. goal was $6,000, but the amount raised was $10,048. The south-wide B. W. M. U. also oversubscribed its goal of $60,000, by raising $75,000.

Of these golden jubilee gifts, $50,000 will go toward the moving of the W. M. U. Training school in Louisville, Ky., which has outgrown its quarters, to The Beeches, on the outskirts of the city near the theological seminary. Mrs. Ryland Knight, of Atlanta, spoke for the training school on yesterday's program. An additional $10,000 of the jubilee gifts went to the education of negro women of the south. Mrs. Letha Craig, of Atlanta, national president of the negro Baptist convention who made a stirring talk yesterday, thanked the vast audience for the gift.

The superintendents of the associations that met the jubilee requirements were crowned with gold crowns at the conclusion of the afternoon's program, while 50 candles burned on the altar to signify the 50th anniversary.

One hundred and twenty-five young people from the Baptist churches of Atlanta took part in the pageant, "Under the Banner of Love, Youth Marches On," which was under the direction of Mrs. Ralph B. Smith, Atlanta Association Young People's leader, and her committee. The pageant revealed that Georgia has 22,400 young people enlisted in missionary organizations, and that during 1938 contributions by this group totaled $17,913.51.

After the pageant was over—the cameraman came by. This group was photographed last night at the 17th annual session of the Baptist Women's Missionary Union. A pageant by the young people was a feature. Participants (left to right) are Eleanor Rudisill, Mary Magbee, Catherine Nolan, Billy Anderson, Frank Carlock, Ralph Grimes. Mrs. W. W. McKinney, counselor, is seated.

GEORGIA'S WEALTH IN LIVESTOCK NEAR HUNDRED MILLION

970,000 Head of Cattle Valued at $20,925,000; Imports of Meat and Eggs Cut Drastically.

An increase in the live stock industry in Georgia was reported yesterday in the biennial review of the State Department of Agriculture.

Livestock reported on Georgia farms January 1 this year, the department said, showed increases in hogs, cattle, milk cows and chickens over the previous year. The total value of all live stock on that date was estimated at $90,891,000 as compared with $88,861,000 for the previous year.

The estimated number of hogs on Georgia farms at the start of the year was 1,554,000 for the value of $11,132,000 as compared with 1,363,000 with a value of $9,695,000 in 1938.

$20,925,000 Cattle. Cattle showed a total number of 970,000 valued at $20,925,000 as compared with 942,000 valued at $19,421,000 in 1938.

The report said that chickens number 8,143,000, valued at $5,049,000 this year while last year the totals were 7,138,000 and $4,426,000.

The department said that in spite of this increase of live stock over last year, Georgia was still importing considerable live stock, indicating room for further expansion in this industry.

In 1938, the report said, 11,369,422 pounds of dressed cattle, 135,502 of dressed hogs, 2,094,896 of dressed sheep, 3,747,929 of dressed calves, 949,548 cases of eggs, 4,223,011 pounds of margarine, 1,586,161 pounds of butter, 4,507,116 pounds of cheese and 14,119,168 pounds of evaporated milk were shipped into this state last year.

Compared to 1937. In 1937, however, it was pointed out the state imported 15,248,995 pounds of dressed cattle; 150,000 of dressed hogs; 2,787,961 of dressed sheep; 4,038,521 of dressed calves; 1,459,853 cases of eggs; 3,489,408 pounds of margarine; 1,989,182 pounds of butter, and 213,393 pounds of cheese. There was no corresponding report for evaporated milk.

The department reported that a campaign to prevent reinfection of Georgia stock with cattle fever ticks had been successful in the last two years.

Farm products valued at $3,235,714 were sold at the seven state farmers' markets in Georgia during the past two years, the Department of Agriculture reported.

Atlanta in Lead. The Atlanta market ranked first with sales of $2,852,965 in 1938 and of $4,689,532 in 1937 for a two-year total of $7,542,497. Macon was second with 1937 sales of $151,224 and 1938 sales of $252,393 for a total of $403,617.

Valdosta came third with 1937 sales of $38,500 and 1938 sales of $45,200 for a total of $83,700, while Thomasville was fourth with 1937 sales of $28,000 and 1938 sales of $45,200 for a total of $73,200. Valdosta and Thomasville figures are approximate.

HOG LOSSES TRACED TO COCKLEBUR SPROUTS. The State Veterinarian's Department in its biennial report says investigation of numerous reports of death losses in hogs in the late spring months has been traced to pigs foraging on cocklebur shoots.

Tests, the department reported, disclosed that the sprouts of the cocklebur are sweet when at the two-leaf stage, although they develop repulsive taste and odor as the plant matures. In the early stage a poisonous principle is existent in the young sprouts. Mature plants are only mildly toxic.

The report recommended that farmers avoid allowing pigs to graze in cocklebur areas during the young stage of the plants.

Saito Gesture Brings Pearls Of Appreciation

TOKYO, March 23.—(Thursday).—A Japanese jeweler today offered the American embassy 20 pearl necklaces as an expression of gratitude for the action of the United States government in assigning a naval cruiser to carry back to Japan the ashes of Hiroshi Saito, former Japanese ambassador to Washington.

The jeweler, Toshio Ukuno, president of an Osaka company, appeared at the embassy and asked Captain Harold Bemis, naval attaché, to present the pearls to the officers of the cruiser, the vessel bringing Saito's ashes home.

Captain Bemis replied that acceptance of the necklaces must be left to the discretion of the Astoria's commander. Said Ukuno, "I thought the pearls of the officers might not be enough I will send more."

Emory Students Choose Between Books and Food

It's now a choice between books and breakfast with one group of students in the Emory University School of Theology.

When given the alternative of meeting class each morning at 1:45 o'clock or each morning at 7, the students voted for the early hour. But for some of them it means forfeiting or postponing breakfast since the university cafeteria does not open until 7 o'clock.

The situation resulted from complaints from some of Dr. John D. Lee's students that they were unable to meet Saturday afternoon classes because of week-end preaching engagements. Dr. Lee, who is assistant professor of church history, allowed the class to vote on the option and agreed to accept their decision.

The course, "History of Methodism," will continue throughout the spring quarter. The "dawn patrol" started its early morning classes yesterday.

STATE POLICE BILL IS KILLED IN S. C.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 22.—(UP)—Governor Burnet Maybank denied further responsibility for lack of law enforcement in the state today after the South Carolina house had killed the state police bill by a vote of 64 to 44.

"I promised the people law and order," Maybank said. "The house of representatives said 'No.' It leaves my office without adequate means of enforcing the law it should have. I carried out my promise to the people. They cannot hold me responsible for any lack of law enforcement."

Maybank had considered the selection of Melvin Purvis, former ace federal agent, as director of the proposed force.

CONGRESS CONTROL OF MONEY FEARED

Treasury Aide Says Devaluation Might Result.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(P)—A treasury official testified today that world conditions might force a devaluation of United States currency if congress curtailed existing monetary powers of the President and tried to handle them itself.

The witness, Harry D. White, director of monetary research for the treasury, urged extension of presidential powers to alter the gold content of the dollar, operate the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, and continue the domestic silver program. Unless congress acts, these expire July 1.

White, testifying before a senate banking subcommittee, drew a critical crossfire of questioning from both Democratic and Republican senators who oppose extension of the powers.

Crusader in War on Hitchhiking Finds Herself Pictured as 'Culprit'!

She Does Her Bit in Police Drive by Posing, But Is Misunderstood.

She did her bit—and was misunderstood. This was the plight yesterday of Miss Marion Simmons, 15, attractive Atlanta school girl and zealous crusader in the law's drive against the practice of students "thumbing" rides to and from school.

Miss Simmons was in Piedmont park when a photographer for The Constitution requested her to pose with Bernard Swafford, another student, for a picture to illustrate the police campaign against hitchhiking.

The picture appeared in The Constitution yesterday—and Miss Simmons found herself the object of goodnatured "kidding" when she came to classes.

Meanwhile, Captain Jack Malcom, head of the police traffic bureau, reiterated previous statements that the law intends to "clamp down" on student hitchhikers.

He added that complaints from motorists lead to the department's resolve to put an end to the practice.

Kirby Rallies To Trounce Cothran, 3-1, and Gain Semi-Finals

DOROTHY UPSETS JANE FIRST TIME IN SIX ATTEMPTS

Helen Dettweiler, Defending Champ, Bows to Jean Bauer.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 22.—(AP) Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., the defending champion, fell by the wayside today as Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, led the field into the semi-finals of the ninth Augusta women's golf tournament.

Two down going to 12 after making the turn all even, Miss Kirby steadied her game to vanquish Mrs. Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 3 and 1. It was Dorothy's first win over Jane in six starts. Her next opponent will be Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., who turned back Miss Dettweiler, 1 up, today.

In the lower bracket, the veteran Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, overwhelmed Isabel Ogilvie, of Augusta, 7 and 6, and tomorrow will play Alice Rutherford, of Alameda, N. J., who eliminated Mrs. Edward L. Howe, of Philadelphia, 2 and 1, today.

Miss Kirby, needing a four for a two-over 78, putted dead on the first nine and needed to dynamite at the eighth when the Greenville shotmaker laid her rival a dead stymie. Holding the try, Miss Kirby soon saw the tide go against her as Mrs. Cothran proceeded to win the tenth and eleventh after erring tee shots had proved costly to the Atlanta.

The Georgia girl narrowed the margin to one hole when she won the twelfth but the "unlucky" thirteenth witnessed Mrs. Cothran go two up again. This set the stage for Miss Kirby to put on her match-winning scoring streak.

The Kirby-Bauer match tomorrow will be launched at 1 o'clock, Augusta time.

BUFORD DEFEATS OGLETHORPE, 4-1

BUFORD, Ga., March 22.—Buford's National Semi-pro champions defeated Oglethorpe University 4 to 1 here this afternoon.

It was the second straight win for the semi-pros, who will play Red Barron's Monroe Aggies tomorrow afternoon at Monroe, Ga.

Munn's, the new right-hander, pitching his first full game for Buford, limited the collegians to four hits. He kept them well scattered until the eighth when the lone Oglethorpe run was scored.

Gerald McQuaig, with three for four, led Buford's hitting, while C. King, with two hits, was outstanding for the Petrels.

Davey O'Brien Signs With Philly Eagles

FORT WORTH, Texas, March 22.—(AP)—Davey O'Brien, who shook his head for months at tempting offers to play professional football, capitulated today for a monetary consideration reported among the highest in the pro ranks.

The Texas Christian University All-American quarterback insisted for months he'd rather hunt oil than touchdowns, but in the face of the Philadelphia Eagles' bid, he decided his career as a geologist could wait.

Bert Bell, owner of the Eagles, did not disclose the salary, but most estimates hovered around the $10,000 figure, with possibly a cut at the gate. The contract, it was understood, will give O'Brien a share of the Eagles' gate receipts.

Giant Chances Soar As Vets Bear Down

"Arm As Good As Ever," Says Screwball Ace After First Real Test.

BATON ROUGE, La., March 22.—(AP)—Repairs on two of baseball's greatest pitching arms were put to rigid tests today—and passed. For the first time since surgeons lifted chipped bones out of their elbows last winter, King Carl Hubbell and Harold Schumacher uncovered their respective left and right for rapid fire in an exhibition game with the Philadelphia Athletics.

The New York Giants' chances for the National League pennant soared as the veterans bore down for three innings each and allowed three hits and one run between them.

Both pitchers were elated and followers of the club at spring training camp here maintained the two had regained the old form that won league champions for the Giants in 1933, 1936 and 1937.

Hubbell took the mound first. He allowed only one hit during his three innings—a home run to the right-field bushes by Dick Seibert. Came the second frame and "Hub" retired the side on six pitched balls. The third was just as easy.

"Oh, boy, the old arm felt fine," said Carl in the Giants' dressing room afterwards as he submitted to an alcohol rub.

"Yes, I bore down plenty. Didn't feel the elbow a bit although my shoulder was a little sore. That'll work out."

"I shot the screwball in there and it was working. My fast one was okay, too."

But was the pay roll arm working up to old form?

"You ask me that and I'll tell you yes. As far as I can tell it's just as good as it ever was. Of course, I held back some. It's no use straining myself too much yet. But I'm satisfied now."

Meanwhile, Schumacher was out on the hill facing his test. He blanketed the Athletics for his three-inning spell, giving up one hit in the fifth and another in the sixth. Then, sent to the locker room, he came from under his shower all smiles.

"I haven't a kick in the world," he beamed, patting his right arm. "It worked fine. Not a bit of soreness. I think I'm ready to pitch some real ball this season."

Wyatt First Dodger To Go Six Innings.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—Pete Reiser, a 19-year-old shortstop who was born in St. Louis and once was in the Cardinal chain, helped beat the St. Louis Cardinals today with a three-run homer and two singles that led the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 6-4 victory.

Whitlow Wyatt, the winning pitcher, was the first Brooklyn hurler to go six innings. He gave up all of the Cardinal runs and six hits, but struck out four and was charged with several hits that might have been scored as errors. Dodger misplays also accounted for two of the tallies off him.

BOYS' HIELEVEN TO PLAY ALUMNI THIS AFTERNOON

Purples Book 11-Game Schedule; Mawry, S. C., Columbus New Foes.

By ROY WHITE. Football, with a varsity-alumni game at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the Rose Bowl field, the announcement of an 11-game schedule for 1939 and preparations for a Boys' High-Tech High game Friday week, was the chief sporting interest at Boys' High Wednesday.

The alumni-varsity game today will bring together several former outstanding Purple stars, against a proposed 1939 eleven and will give Coach Shorty Doyal and Dwight Keith some basis with which to work on for the first annual spring game with the Smithies next week.

Ray Miller, Billy Massengale, Ben Ehrlich, Hog DeFreese, from Tech, Webb and Kuniyans, are the former Purple luminaries around which the alumni eleven has been built.

LINEUP UNCERTAIN.

The new candidates are inexperienced and untried for the most part, so no starting lineup has been announced.

Two new teams, with representation from four states are included on the Purples' 11-game card for this fall.

Mawry, High, of Norfolk, Va., was definitely added Wednesday morning, completing the program.

Mawry, Greenville, S. C., Knoxville, Tenn., and Miami, Fla., are the out-of-state representatives.

Monroe Aggies, Elberton High and Enslay High, of Birmingham, have been dropped, cutting the schedule to 11 games and allowing for Mawry and Columbus to be taken on.

Mawry has been signed for a lone game at Norfolk, Va., on Thanksgiving afternoon. The other new team is Columbus High.

SAME OLD RIVALS.

The old team Commercial, Knoxville, Greenville, Commercial, Marist, G. M. A., Lanier, Tech High and Miami High, again appear on the Purples' card.

Dot Jumps Stymie for First Time

Jane Cothran's Brilliant Putting Had Kirby in Hot Water.

FOREST HILLS HOTEL, AUGUSTA, Ga., March 22.—At long last I came through and won from Jane Cothran, 3 and 1. However, I was down practically all the way but got a few breaks on the back side which turned things a bit.

Starting out it was pretty bad and then Jane started her putting and sunk a beautiful putt on the second for a birdie four to go one up and then she won the next with a good putt for par four. I won the next and we tied all square. We were both out in a 39.

There seems to be some sort of a jinx for me on that tenth hole for I hook there every time and have to lose a stroke for going in the ditch. Today I took a fine six.

MISSED PUTTS. Jane missed putts on the 13th, 14th and 15th holes but came back to get a fine two on the short 16th and the match ended on the 17th where I managed to get a long putt in for a birdie.

Tomorrow, Jean Bauer and I meet for the third time. Jean beat me in this same tournament last year on the 20th hole and then we played again this year at Miami and I won that one.

Jane and Helen had a swell match. They went to the 10th where Jean had Helen one down and one to go and they halved the hole. In the other match, between Mrs. Hill and Ogilvie, Mrs. Hill won handily, 7 and 6.

Alice Rutherford beat Mrs. Howe so Mrs. Hill and Rutherford meet tomorrow.

JUMPS STYMIE. I nearly forgot, on the eighth hole I did something today that I have never done before and that was jump a stymie. I've made a lot of attempts at it but never succeeded before. I used a dynamiter and I was certainly surprised and pleased to see that little ball get in the hole.

Before the matches started this morning a bunch of us got one of the waiters, who has a German shepherd dog, to show us some of the tricks the dog could do. I had heard a lot of big stories about how he could tell time and read Roman numerals and tell you how old he is.

Now, after seeing all of this, I

WILLIAMS SIGNS HIS '39 CONTRACT WITH LOOKOUTS

Only Jim Galvin Unsigned; Chambers Works Out.

SANFORD, Fla., March 22.—(AP) Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga Lookouts, said today that Al Williams, counted on as a starting pitcher, had signed his contract, and only Catcher Jim Galvin now remains unsigned.

Another bright spot was the fact that John Chambers, pitcher, who has been unable to practice because of an ailing knee, worked out for a short while.

Johnny Michaels Is First Peb Casualty.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 22.—(AP)—Manager George Toporer started pruning his Little Rock Traveler squad today, releasing outright Rookie Pitchers Archie Humphreys and Rebon Chadwick and First Baseman Charles Barrett.

The first casualty of the season in the Traveler camp was Johnny Michaels, veteran southpaw pitcher, who had four infected teeth removed after complaining of back pains for more than a week.

Last-minute changes in intracamp games, due to start today, sent two squads of Travelers against each other and two Boston "B" camp teams together.

Traveler-Boston games originally had been planned.

Kola Sharp Considers Retirement.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 22.—(AP)—Kola Sharp, Little Rock pitcher who has refused to sign his contract, said tonight he was considering retirement from baseball.

"The next move is up to them," he said, referring to the Southern association club for which he has been offered five seasons. He declared salary was the main stumbling block to an agreement. Sharp teaches school near here.

Long Island Takes Metropolitan Meet

NEW YORK, March 22.—(AP)—Long Island University's all-victorious basketball forces ran big Mike Novak and his Loyola teammates from Chicago off their feet tonight and ran away with a 44-32 triumph to win the second annual Metropolitan Writers' invitation tournament.

Handcuffing the 6-foot-9-inch Loyola center from start to finish and making the rest of the midwesterners look like high school boys, the mighty Blackbirds chalked up their 23rd straight victory of the season as easily as though it was a practice match against their scrubs, while a crowd of 18,033 fans who packed Madison Square Garden cheered them on.

Third place in the tournament went to the team from Bradley Tech, of Illinois, who downed St. John's, of Brooklyn, 40 to 35.

F. G. Thomas Takes Lead in Ham Meet

A score of 79 posted yesterday by F. G. Thomas took the early lead in the ham tournament now being conducted at the Candler park golf course.

Pro Teddy Hayes is confident that at least 100 golfers will enter the novel tourney which will run till April 2.

DICK COFFMAN ILL.

BATON ROUGE, La., March 22.—(AP)—Dick Coffman, ace relief hurler of the Cincinnati Reds, was sent to a hospital tonight after complaining of pains in his right side that doctors diagnosed as possible appendicitis.

REDS GET MASCOT.

TAMPA, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds acquired a new mascot today, a trained chimpanzee. Trainer Dick Rohde promptly put him in uniform and tried to make him learn the baseball business.

am convinced of the dogs' ability. I have never seen such a smart dog. A Chinese boy trained him in Maine and believe me, he really did a good job of it. Well, only two more rivers to cross, I hope I make it and don't slip on the way.

ALL IN THE GAME

and folks flocked from everywhere to see the great brand of golf on display.

The Masters unquestionably is the world's most unique tournament. And at the same time it should produce record scores. Only the best are invited. And all they're waiting on is a stretch of sunshine. And then watch the birdies sing.

IT'S A FAVORITE.

The pros privileged to get invitations to play in the tournament look forward to it every year. They like the system of pairings and the fine hospitality accorded by Cliff Roberts and his aides.

Horton Smith has suggested that, in addition to the money for the winners, Bob Jones medals also should be awarded. Pros like the money but they are amateur enough in spirit to want a keepsake of this sort.

And it is quite a tribute to Bob Jones that they should. One of these days Bob, who remains the idol of all golfers, probably will turn in an astonishing score. But no one expects him to win. It's asking too much.

He long since has retired from competition. He has the same old zest for the game, but in order to compete against the best in top-flight golf it is necessary to play competitive golf a great deal. This Jones does not do. The fact that he plays and makes a creditable showing is enough. It wouldn't be a Masters tournament without him.

CRACKERS BEAT SAVANNAH, 9 TO 3

rors by Rubeling and Anderson caused the charity runs. Savannah got two of their four hits off Robinson in the fourth, however.

Bolling, Anderson, Mailho and Oetting each hit safely twice to push Richards for batting honors. The Crackers nicked three Savannah rookies, Clements, Tilo and Carpenter, all right-handers, for 12 hits.

Fielding performances during exhibition games are not overly significant, but the Crackers committed three errors and allowed two looping fly balls to fall into leftfield for base hits. This was in direct contrast to their flawless catches of Tuesday.

Anderson, despite his error, continued to look the part of a fine, young second baseman. He beat out a slow infield roller and slammed a line drive against the left-field wall. In three exhibition games, he is hitting .375.

Richards singled in the second, went to second on Miller's sacrifice and romped home on Bolling's single to open the scoring. Consecutive doubles by Mailho and Oetting, Willett's error of Rubeling's grounder and a single by Richards added three more to the Crackers' total in the third.

Savannah got back in the ball game, temporarily, in the last of the third. Robinson walked, Francolina, Rubeling muffed Smith's bouncer and Tilo walked to fill the bases. Francolina came home on Evans' sacrifice fly to Mailho.

Smith scored when Parker rolled out, Anderson to Bolling, and Tilo crossed the plate when Anderson booted Taylor's grounder.

Atlanta forged ahead in the fifth. Rubeling crashed his home run and Bolling followed suit, with Richards, who had walked, and Williams, hitting for Robinson, on base. Final Cracker tally came on Oetting's circuit blow in the sixth.

Exhibition games with the Indians will continue daily until the Crackers break camp next Monday.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS

By EMILY BRONTE

INSTALLMENT III.

In my dream Rev. Jakes had a full and attentive congregation; and he preached—good God! what a sermon: divided into 490 parts, each fully equal to an ordinary address from the pulpit, and each discussing a separate sin! Where he searched for them, I cannot tell. He had his private manner of interpreting the phrase, and it seemed necessary the brother should sin different sins on every occasion. They were of the most curious character: odd transgressions that I never imagined previously. I was awakened then by the branch of a fir tree that touched my lattice, as a blast wafted by and rattled its dry cones against the panes! I listened doubtfully an instant; detected the disturber, then turned and dozed, and dreamed again.

This time I remembered I was lying in the oak closet and I heard distinctly the gusty wind, and the driving of the snow; I heard, also, the fir bough repeat its teasing sound, and ascribed it to the right cause, but it did not so much that I resolved to silence it, if possible; and, I thought, I rose and endeavored to unhasp the casement. The hook was soldered into the staple: a circumstance observed by me when awake but forgotten. "I must stop it, nevertheless!" I muttered, knocking my knuckles through the glass, and stretching my arm out to seize the importunate branch; instead of which my fingers closed on the fingers of a little, ice-cold hand! The intense horror of nightmare came over me; I tried to draw back my arm, but the hand clung to it, and a most melancholy voice sobbed, "Let me in—let me in!" "Who are you?" I asked, struggling meanwhile to disengage myself. "Catherine Linton," it replied, shivering. "I'm come home; I'd lost my way on the moor!" As it spoke, I discerned, obscurely, a child's face looking through the window. Terror made me cruel; and, finding it useless to attempt shaking the creature off, I pulled its wrist on to the broken pane, and rubbed it to and fro till the blood ran down and soaked the bedclothes.

"I'll never let you in, not if you beg for 20 years." "It is 20 years," mourned the voice. "Twenty years? I've been a waif for 20 years!" I tried to jump up; but could not stir a limb; and so yelled aloud, in a frenzy of fright. To my confusion, I discovered the yell was not ideal: hasty footsteps approached my chamber door; somebody pushed it open with a vigorous hand, and a light glimmered through the squares at the top of the bed.

"Is anyone here?" Heathcliff stood near the entrance, in his shirt and trousers; with a candle dripping over his fingers, and his face as white as the wall behind him. "It is only your guest, sir," I called out. "I had the misfortune to scream in my sleep, owing to a frightful nightmare. I'm sorry I disturbed you."

"Oh, God, confound you, Mr. Lockwood!" commenced my host, setting the candle on a chair, because he found it impossible to hold it steady. "And who showed you up into this room? I've a good mind to turn them out of the house this moment!" "It was your servant, Zillah," I replied, flinging myself on to the floor and rapidly resuming my garments. "I should not care if you did, Mr. Heathcliff; she richly deserves it," I supposed, she wanted to get another proof that the place was haunted, at my expense. Well, it is—swarming with ghosts and goblins! You have no reason in shutting it up, I assure you. No one will thank you for a doze in such a den!"

"What do you mean?" asked Heathcliff, "and what are you doing?" Lie down and finish out the night, since you are here; but, for Heaven's sake! don't repeat that horrid noise; nothing could excuse it, unless you were having your throat cut!" "If the little fiend had got in at the window, she probably would have strangled me!" I returned. "I'm not going to endure the persecutions of your hospitable ancestors again. Was not the Reverend Jakes Branderham akin to you on the mother's side? And that minx, Catherine Linton, or Earnshaw, or however she was called—she must have been a changeling—wicked little soul! She told me she had been walking the earth those 20 years; a just punishment for her mortal transgressions, I've no doubt!"

Scarcely were these words uttered, when I recollected the association of Heathcliff's with Catherine's name in the book, which had completely slipped from my memory; till thus awakened. "The truth is, sir, I passed the first part of the night in spelling over the name scratched on that window-ledge. A monotonous occupation, calculated to set me asleep, like counting, or—"

"What can you mean by talking in this way to me?" thundered Heathcliff with savage vehemence. "How—how dare you, under my roof? God! He's mad to speak so!"

I did not know whether to resent this language or to pursue my explanation; but I continued my toilette rather noisily, looked at my watch, and soliloquized on the length of the night: "Not 3 o'clock yet! I could have taken oath it had been 6. Time staggers here. We must surely have retired to rest at 8!"

"Always at 9 in winter, and rise at 4," said my host, suppressing a groan; and, as I fancied by the motion of his arm's shadow, dashing a tear from his eyes. "Mr. Lockwood," he added, "you may go into my room; you'll only be in the way, coming downstairs so early; and your childish outcry has sent sleep to the devil for me."

"And for me, too," I replied. "I'll walk in the yard till daylight, and then I'll be off."

"Take the candle and go where you please. I shall join you directly. Keep out of the yard, though. The dogs are unchained. I'll come in two minutes!" I obeyed, so far as to quit the chamber, but outside the door I stood still and was witness to a piece of superstition on the part of my landlord, which belied, oddly, his apparent sense. He got on to the bed, and wrenched open the lattice, as he pulled at it, into an uncontrollable passion of tears. "Come in! Come in!" he sobbed. "Cathy, do come. Oh, do—once more! Oh! my heart's darling! hear me this time, Catherine, at last! The spectre showed a sign of ordinary price; it gave no sign of being; but the snow and wind whirled wildly through, even reaching my station, and blowing out the light."

There was such an anguish in the gush of grief that I descended cautiously to the lower regions, and landed in the back kitchen, where a gleam of fire, raked compactly together, enabled me to rekindle my candle.

Two benches, shaped in sections of a circle, nearly enclosed the hearth; on one of these I stretched myself. Finally an elastic footstep told me that Hareton Earnshaw was rummaging a corner for a spade or shovel to dig through the drifts. He glanced over the back of the bench, dialing his nostrils, and, I'm sure, thought little of exchanging civilities with me. I guessed, by his preparations, that egress was allowed, and leaving my hard couch, made a movement to follow him. He noticed this, and, thrice, dialing his nostrils, and the end of his spade, intimating by an inarticulate sound that there was a place where I must go, if I changed my locality.

It opened into the house where the females were already astir, Zillah urging flakes of flame up the chimney with a colossal bellows, and Mrs. Heathcliff kneeling on the hearth, reading a book by the aid of the blaze. I was surprised to see Heathcliff there, also. He stood by the fire, his back toward me, just finishing a stormy scene to poor Zillah, who ever and anon interrupted her labor to pluck up the corner of her apron, and heave an indignant groan.

"And you, you worthless!"—he broke out as I entered, turning to his daughter-in-law. "There you are, at your idle tricks again! The rest of them do earn their bread—you live on my charity! Put your trash away, and find something to do. You shall pay me for the plague of having you eternally in my sight—do you hear, damnable jade?"

"I'll put my trash away, because you can make me, if I refuse," answered the young lady, closing her book, and throwing it on a chair. "But I'll not do anything, though you should swear your tongue out, except what I please!"

I stepped forward briskly, as if eager to partake the warmth of the hearth. Each had enough decorum to suspend further hostilities; Heathcliff placed his fists, out of temptation, in his pockets; Mrs. Heathcliff walked to a seat far off, where she kept her word by playing the part of a statue during the remainder of my stay. That was not long. I declined joining their breakfast, and, at the first gleam of dawn, took an opportunity of escaping into the free air, now clear, and still, and cold as impalpable ice.

My landlord hallooed for me to stop, ere I reached the bottom of the garden, and offered to accompany me across the moor. It was well he did, for the whole hill-back was one billow, white ocean; the swells and falls not indicating corresponding rises and depressions in the ground. We exchanged little conversation, and he halted at the entrance of Thrushcross Park, saying I could make no error there. Our audieux were limited to a hasty bow, and then I pushed forward, trusting to my own resources. The distance from the gate to the Grange is two miles. I believe I managed to make it four, what with losing myself among the trees, and sinking up to the neck in snow. At any rate, whatever my wanderings, the clock chimed 12 as I entered the house; and that gave exactly an hour for every mile of the usual way from Wuthering Heights.

My human fixture and her satellites rushed to welcome me, exclaiming, tumultuously, they had completely given me up. I bid them be quiet, and dragged myself upstairs, almost too feeble to enjoy the cheerful fire and smoking coffee which the servant had prepared for my refreshment. . . .

What vain weather-cocks we are! I, who had determined to hold myself independent of all social intercourse, and thanked my stars that, at length, I had lighted on a spot where it was next to impracticable—I was finally compelled to strike my colors; and, under pretence of wanting information concerning the necessities of my establishment, I desired Mrs. Dean, when she brought in supper, to sit down while I ate it, hoping sincerely she would prove a regular gossip.

"You have lived here a considerable time," I commenced, "did you not say 16 years?"

"Eighteen, sir."

There ensued a pause.

Then she said: "Ah, times are greatly changed since then!"

I asked Mrs. Dean why Heathcliff let Thrushcross Grange, and preferring living in a situation and residence so much inferior.

"Is he not rich enough to keep the estate in good order?" I inquired.

TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR No. 22

As Perry O'Rourke, bound hand and foot, disappeared beneath the surface of the crocodile-infested stream, Dr. Wong Tal cast his eyes heavenward, apparently in silent prayer to his august ancestors. Suddenly he was startled from his Oriental calm. "Look!" he cried.

Major Burton and Janette turned their eyes upward. There, in a great tree that overhung the river, was Tarzan. The ape-man grasped a stout vine and leaped out into space, swooping down toward the water in a wide, dizzy arc. O'Rourke came gasping to the surface.

As the current rolled and tossed him, Perry caught a brief glimpse of the crocodile, now almost upon him. Either he would be drowned or devoured. Suddenly he heard a splash in the water beside him. Two hands of steel encircled his body. They gripped, tightened.

Clamping Perry in his legs, Tarzan pulled him from the range of the crocodile's jaws. Then, climbing hand over hand, still bearing his burden, Tarzan vanished into the foliage above. The yellow-men growled angrily. "The others will not escape," the chief muttered.

DR. ABERCROMBIE
RECORD PRAISED

Charges of Nepotism Are 'Unfair,' Chairman Maddox Asserts.

Charges that Dr. T. F. Abercrombie practiced nepotism in the state department which he heads "are unfair," Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the state board of health, asserted yesterday following the annual meeting at which Dr. Abercrombie reported a 5.6 per cent reduction in Georgia deaths last year.

Chairman Maddox and other board members adopted unanimously a resolution asserting their investigation showed the health director employed only one blood relative and three relatives by marriage in a department of 412 persons. The members asserted they had full confidence in Dr. Abercrombie and "regretted the unjust criticism" of the doctor and his department.

Edwards' Attack.
Abercrombie was attacked verbally by Representative H. B. (Hell Bent) Edwards, of Lowndes county, during the recent general assembly. The legislator charged the director had numerous relatives on the health department pay roll who drew salaries and expenses totaling more than $20,000 per year.

"The charge that Dr. Abercrombie had practiced nepotism in the department is unfair," Maddox stated. "His only blood relative on the pay roll of the department is a fourth cousin receiving $150 per month. A sister of Mrs. Abercrombie has been in the laboratories department for about 20 years and is now senior bacteriologist and is one of the most capable in the state. Her services have been satisfactory in every way and her place would be difficult to fill. There is also employed a cousin of Mrs. Abercrombie, who is a clerk in the vital statistics department receiving $83 a month and her services have been and are entirely satisfactory."

Record Lows.
Dr. Abercrombie reported to the board that record lows in five major death causes were established last year but he deplored that there is no money to continue the fight to retard cancer.

He also declared the solution of "many major public health problems has been retarded by the large number of counties that do not provide local health service and do not contribute money for health purposes." He said 94 counties did not participate.

Dr. Abercrombie told the board that record lows were reached in maternal mortality, stillbirths, typhoid fever, malaria and diphtheria.

Malaria deaths decreased 40.8 per cent to 4.5 per cent in 1938, he said. Maternal mortality dropped 10.8 per cent and stillbirths 8.9 per cent. The typhoid fever death rate dropped from 4.5 per cent in 1937 to 3.9 per cent last year. The diphtheria rate decreased from 3.5 to 3.4 per cent.

Dr. Abercrombie asserted no funds have been available since December 1 for treatment of "many applicants for treatment have had to be refused." He reported about 170 applicants are being received monthly by the health department.

OPERATIONS SAVE
IN LUNG CANCER

Disease Form Was Once Considered Hopeless.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 22.—(AP)—Increasingly successful operations in lung cancer cases, once considered "perfectly hopeless," represent an outstanding development in modern surgery, Dr. Frank E. Adair, of Cornell University, told a mid-western conference of the American College of Surgeons here today.

Chances of a patient to recover from a lung cancer operation, he said, now are about the same as those of the person undergoing a serious abdominal operation.

"The morbidity rate has fallen to 16 or 17 per cent," Dr. Adair said, "which compares with the rate in serious abdominal operations."

PRINCIPAL SPAHR, OF RAGSDALE, DIES

Services Will Be Held This Afternoon for Veteran Educator.

Miss Fanny Ann Spahr, principal of the I. N. Ragdale school since 1913, died yesterday morning in a private hospital after a short illness. She was 62 years old.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill, with the Rev. E. P. Carson and the Rev. E. E. Steele officiating. Burial will be in West View cemetery.

Miss Spahr was born in Atlanta, the daughter of the late Professor and Mrs. Otto Spahr, prominently identified with musical circles here. She attended the primary schools of the city, was a graduate of Girls' High school, and held A. B. and M. A. degrees from Oglethorpe University.

She has no immediate survivors, and for the last several years made her home with Miss Ida Hurtell, assistant principal of the Ragdale school, at 1698 Noble drive, N. E.

Miss Spahr began her teaching career approximately 40 years ago at the State Street school, and was then an instructor and assistant principal at the Ivy Street school. She was made principal of the Oakland City school, later renamed the I. N. Ragdale school, 26 years ago.

Ernest Brewer, member of the board of education for the fourth ward last night expressed regret "for the fourth ward and personally" at the death of Miss Spahr.

"The community suffers a severe loss," he said, "and she leaves a vacancy that will not be easy to fill."

ATLANTA TRADE BODY
BACKS FIGHT ON RATES

The Atlanta Federation of Trades last night adopted a resolution expressing willingness to "aid in any way possible" the fight of the Southeastern Governors' Conference, which met here Tuesday, for freight rate equality.

The resolution was adopted at a meeting of the federation in the labor temple. The declaration also urged central labor bodies throughout the state to concur in the resolution.
